Where Are the Bears?
Big, Mixed Russia.
Big, Rich Chicago.
Busy Henry Ford.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright 1928.)

WHAT suddenly became of gentlemen preparing a gala festival for Wall Street bears? Don't gamble, you would lose. But keep in mind that as James Speyer says, "prosperity must be the natural condition of the United States, unless we are very foolish."

BUSY times in Wall Street yesterday, 765,000 shares sold in the first hour, of which 310,000 were General Motors stock.

Another "3,000,000 share day" with money lending at 4½ per cent. Don't sell this country short. That course is financially poisonous.

JOSEPH TOPLITZKY of Los Angeles, abnormally intelligent, says "don't forget that gigantic investment trusts are buying millions of shares, paying all cash and taking them out of the market. The little man is stabilizing prices. Some companies are buying enormous quantities of their own stock for employes."

THE population of Soviet Russia has risen to 146,898,000, and there are 5,000,000 more women than men. That shows what war has done. The previous census showed only 500,000 more women than men.

RUSSIA'S much mixed millions are divided into 577 different tribes, speaking 150 different languages. What we call "Russians" are less than half the population.

THE late Count Witte, when here arranging with Roosevelt to end the Japanese-Russian war, said to this writer, "You mustn't be surprised that Russia has not perfect government. The wonder is that we have any, with our mixed populations hating each other, and many languages. If this government falls it may be a long time before Russia gets another."

However Russia has another, apparently a strong one.

CHICAGO was 91 years old last Sunday. Ninety-one years ago, the new born city voted to spend $60 "to drain a pond in State street." This year Chicago appropriates $50,000,000 for parks, $15,000,000 for a new municipal hall, and puts out a bond issue of $50,000,000.

Five hundred dollars invested on the Chicago lake front 91 years ago would be worth easily $50,000,000 today. This country grows rapidly. Get a good piece of real estate, take care of it, and it will take care of you. But be sure it is the right piece, look out for sharks, and don't buy unless you know what you are buying, and why you are buying.

HENRY FORD says two things that interest you. He will continue to work at his flivver plane until he is able to produce a small strong machine for the price of one of his new automobiles. And he is at work perfecting a Diesel engine to carry a huge passenger plane across the Atlantic. That new engine, new fuel idea, is important.

Ford hopes to make the flight himself, "but not this year." Ford, who says, "I'm a Republican because I was born one," repeats that he is for Hoover, for President.

ONE third the Radcliffe College students, half the Harvard students, replying to questions about companionate marriage, approve that invention. Two Harvard men and one Radcliffe girl are married already in that fashion. Twenty-two Radcliffe girls are willing to marry on the companionate plan.

THIS proves some girls at Radcliffe and some men at Harvard know little about life. When they know more, their views will change.

IF THE 22 Radcliffe girls enter companionate marriages, they will know, when their faces begin to have lines, their hips get wider, and their eyes dim, that they made a mistake.

A SOCIETY in Japan urges girls, for economy's sake, to be married in kimonos of cotton instead of silk.

That Japanese society should establish a branch here. Our cotton growers here need it. Women that once wore yards of cotton, in made petticoats, now wear about half a yard of imitation silk underwear.

A YOUNG lady, 23 years old, pretty, wife of Lieutenant Fernic, Roumanian war ace, arrives by boat and means to fly back. "I don't believe the Atlantic is as big as it looks, and I am unafraid," says she. That's the spirit of progress. She should stay here and raise a family.

The Weather

Cloudy and warmer tonight and Wednesday; lowest temperature tonight between 25 and 30 degrees; probably light rain Wednesday.

Because she misplaced her husband, Ted Coy, Jeanne Eagels is having difficulty obtaining a divorce. A Chicago lawyer, engaged by the actress, searched all through the hills of Ossining, N. He expressed discouragement by saying things looked hopeless for his client's success in obtaining a divorce in New York state.

FULL PROBE BODY GETS STRIKE TOUR REPORT

By MAX HENRICI,
Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 6.—The sufferings of the strikers, the degradation amid which the strikebreakers are living and the alleged brutalities of the coal and iron police were laid before the Interstate Commerce Committee of the Senate today by Senator Frank R. Gooding, of Idaho, chairman of the sub-committee which recently was sent to Pittsburgh to make a survey of the coal strike in preparation for a formal investigation by the full committee.

Gooding made an oral report, to be followed in the near future by a written one. He did not go into the economic phases of the conflict today, but merely drew a word picture of conditions in the camps as seen in a five-day tour. He had with him about 140,000 words of testimony informally taken, but stenographically recorded during the tour and also copies of hymn books containing the hymns that the strikers at Rossiter were forbidden to sing on the Magyar Presbyterian Church property by Judge J. N. Langham's injunction.

PROBE OPENS TOMORROW

The investigation by the full committee will start at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning when John L. Lewis, president of the United

Blind, But She Heads Classes At Johnstown

JOHNSTOWN, Pa., March 6.—Angeline Ranerl, 17, a student at Junior High School, is blind, but that condition didn't deter her from ranking highest in studies last month among the 1,050 students.

Angeline lost her sight seven years ago when a bomb, sent through the mails, exploded in her home.

COAL CO. GOES TO RECEIVER

The Bertha-Consumers Company, one of the largest coal operating corporations in Western Pennsylvania, and the Four States Supply Company, which controls a string of stores in mining communities, both of Pittsburgh, late Monday afternoon were placed in the hands of receivers by Federal Judge W. H. S. Thomson.

John H. Jones, president of the coal company, and Fred E. Powers, a member of the board of directors of the coal company, were appointed its receivers and placed under a joint bond of $100,000. J. Lloyd Grimm, of Pittsburgh, was appointed receiver of the supply company and was required to give $25,000 bond.

BLAME COAL DEPRESSION

In both cases the depressed condition of the coal business was cited as making the receiverships necessary in order to preserve the assets of the two concerns. In both suits, the defendant concerns joined with the complaints in asking appointment of receivers.

In the suit against the coal company the complaints were the Watts-Ritter Company of Huntingdon, W. Va., and Stevenson Company of Fairmont, W. Va., the latter company setting forth in the bill of complaint that the Bertha-Consumers Company is indebted to it in the sum of $5,149.14, upon a promissory 90-day note, given to the order of the Four States Supply Company. The bill sets forth that the defendant company is indebted $3,660.23 to the Watts-Ritter Company upon a promissory note, also given to the order of the supply company.

The Watts-Ritter Company brought the suit against the Four States Supply Company, which operates eight stores in Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky, and had capital stock of $50,000 in the hands of its stockholders.

MORROW MAKES STATEMENT

While the Pittsburgh Coal Company is not mentioned in either of the two proceedings, a statement was issued by J. D. A. Morrow, president of the company, that the Bertha Consumers' Company was indebted to his company for coal sold and shipped on the latter concern's orders, and that the Bertha Consumers'

Evicted Miner, Father of Four, Hangs Self

SOUTH FORK, Pa., March 6.—On strike with the union miners, and evicted from a coal company house at Portage last week, Stanley Fisher, 42, father of four small children, committed suicide last night by hanging himself in a shanty back of his new home in Gilestown, near here. Fisher, with his family, had moved to Gilestown last Saturday. His body, hanging from a rafter, was discovered by the children.

Beaten to Death in Strike

Mine warfare was blamed today for the murder of Mike Yarsavage, 38, Lithuanian non-union miner, of the South Side, whose body, with the skull crushed, was found at the end of a blood-stained trail in the little Walters Chapel Cemetery at Rural Ridge on the Russellton road.

Five union miners were taken into custody at Russellton by county detectives, who said the men hadn't been able to explain their movements from 10 o'clock last night, when Mrs. Gertrude Kevary, who lives near the cemetery, heard a frantic voice shouting, "I'm not a scab! Please don't beat me! I'll go on the picket line tomorrow!"

Five sets of footsteps were traced in the fresh snow covering the cemetery last night—five sets going into the cemetery, and four returning. Automobile tracks on the Russellton road indicated that a car had been parked there.

The victim's skull was beaten in, his pockets were empty, and nearby

Dynamite Found at Bridge

Following the discovery of a box of dynamite under the viaduct leading from the Beaver road over the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks into Glenfield, Constable R. F. Shaffer hid all last night nearby, waiting for the return of three Negroes who, it is believed, intended to blast the span.

The constable, who reported his find to county detectives, said that the Negroes had been seen placing the explosive under the viaduct. They did not return.

Escapes Electric Chair

VELMA WEST

VELMA WEST BEATS CHAIR

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

COURTHOUSE, PAINESVILLE, O., March 6.—Velma West, confessed hammer-slayer, won a smashing victory in court today when the state allowed her to plead "guilty of murder in the second degree, the penalty for which is life imprisonment.

Thus she avoided the possibility of paying the supreme penalty—death in the electric chair.

Garbed in a knee-length black silk dress and her slim form trembling, Velma was taken before Judge J. D. Barnes and sentenced to life imprisonment.

VELMA WEEPS

Velma swayed as sentence was pronounced. Her attorney gently escorted her to her chair. Ther when her father, Bert L. Van Woert, came over to console her, she broke down and wept. Her slim form shook like a leaf in the wind.

"Oh, Daddy, Daddy—I don't know what to say," she moaned.

"Don't cry, Baby," said her father, gently, tears coursing down his cheeks.

It was exactly three months ago today that the 21-year-old blonde defendant beat her husband, T. Edward West, to death with a hammer in their "honeymoon bungalow" at Perry O., and then dashed off in her green roadster to a bridge party.

She had come before the bar of justice to be tried for murder in the first degree.

Before even a prospective juror could be examined her attorneys launched the successful move to have the charge against her reduced.

Velma eventually may get out of prison through the instrumentality of the board of pardons. She is eligible for parole after serving 10 years.

When Velma was brought into court today, Prosecutor Seth Paulin stepped before Judge Barnes and said:

"Your honor, my associate, Homer Harper, and myself, have considered the question of accepting this plea offered by counsel for the defense and we recommend that it be accepted."

The question of how Velma was to plead was cut and dried. It had been threshed out in all-day conferences yesterday by attorneys for both sides, in the judge's chambers, with Judge Barnes present. Attorney Francis W. Paulson, Velma's counsel, motioned to her to stand up. She came over beside him and both stood directly before the bar.

Addressing the trembling, pale-faced Velma, the court said:

"Is that your decision?—to plead guilty of murder in the second degree?"

"It is," she said in a barely audible voice.

"Have you anything to say at this time as to why the court

Jaworski Goes on Trial

Heavily armed county detectives and deputy sheriffs guard Criminal Courtroom No. 2 and the corridors of the courthouse today to balk Paul Jaworski, or any of his "Flathead Mob," in any desperate attempt to liberate his brother Sam Jaworski, who was placed on trial before Judge Ambrose B. Reid on six charges growing out of the jail delivery of Paul, together with John Vasbinder, both awaiting electrocution, last August 18.

Sam is the fourth alleged member of the "Flathead Mob" to be placed on trial for crimes in this county. He smuggled four revolvers into the jail in visiting hours, handed two between the bars to Paul, and both shot their way out, injuring Guards Harry Rigler and John Hanlon, according to the charges presented by First Assistant District Attorney Andrew T. Park. Vasbinder accompanied them.

Sam is indicted for the murder of I. L. Gump, payroll guard of the Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Company, near Mollenauer, December 24, 1925, for which murder Paul was convicted. He also is accused of taking part in the $104,000 Coverdale payroll robbery. He will be placed on trial for the murder later.

Chief County Detective G. W. Murren identified Jaworski as Paul Palmer and Paul Walazinski and recited his record in previous holdups. Theodore Steinbrenner, guard, identified Sam Jaworski as the man who handed two guns to Paul Jaworski.

"HAPPY," CHORTLES VELMA

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

PAINESVILLE, O., March 6.—Rippling laughter.

Flashing eyes.

Red lips with the glow of life back in them, and not a sign of regret, worry or sorrow for what she has done.

That today is Velma West. In an interview in her cell she today plans to say good-by to all; she was all girlishness, an amazing character study, as she shrugged:

"Sure I'm happy about not having to go through the trial, but I never did worry about going to the chair. Don't ask me how I knew, but I really never entertained the thought for one moment that I would have the same fate as that Snyder woman. My affair was entirely different from Ruth Snyder's."

But she didn't explain.

Her attorneys sat around and smoked. It was like a party with everybody laughing and joking and beaming with victory.

And Velma went on:

"I'm very curious about my new home. I guess Marysville is a nice enough place. They say I'll have to work a little, but I suppose the work won't be awfully hard. I'm going to try to get an outside job, perhaps working in the garden."

"And when you are free?"

"Oh, when I get out, everyone will have forgotten about me and I'll be all right. Start right over again and do something—I don't know. In fact, I haven't given the matter much thought."

Velma posed for the movie camera men in her cell an hour after she had been sentenced.

"There's been enough scandal," was the attitude of some of the authorities. "We won't make a Somerville, N. J., or a Long Island City out of Painesville. We don't fancy these murder trial scandals."

Lindbergh Back in Capital

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Still guarding his movements mysteriously, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh dropped silently into Washington at 6:30 o'clock this morning. He landed at Bolling Field.

He left Scott Field, Belleville, Ill., at 11 a. m., central time.

Lindbergh's arrival took Washington by surprise.

Only yesterday morning, after being delayed by a bent tail skid, he hopped off from here with four companions for St. Louis. He landed at Scott Field at 6:30 p. m. His companions remained in St. Louis while Lindbergh, using the same Ryan monoplane, returned alone to Washington.

He had a full moon throughout the night to guide his flight.

Upon his arrival here, Lindbergh got in touch with Lieut. Lester Maitland, Hawaiian flier. Maitland said Lindbergh returned to Washington apparently because "he just loves to fly."

On March 21 Col. Lindbergh will be presented with the Congressional Medal of Honor by President Coolidge at formal ceremonies at the White House.

During his visit here, Lindbergh plans to confer with F. Trubee Davison, air secretary of the War Department, and Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of Army Air Corps, about their flight next week to Panama.

Humes Fails to File Enough Petitions

HARRISBURG, March 6.—E. Lowry Humes, Pittsburgh attorney, failed to file sufficient petitions to become a candidate against William N. McNair, of Pittsburgh, for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, it was learned here today.

Six nominating papers for him had been signed and filed, under the impression that that was the required number. After it was too late to circulate others, the error was discovered.

NIP W. VA. PLOT TO BREAK JAIL

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., March 6.—(AP.)—An attempted break from the Monongalia county jail here was frustrated last night when prison officers found a dozen saws hidden in a wash room and on a prisoner.

"Tipped" that some prisoners were conspiring to get away, Sheriff Rodeheaver and Jailer A. J. Richardson started an investigation. After finding a window bar in the wash room had been cut almost through, they rounded up the saws, obtaining several from Ray Perkins, robbery suspect.

SENATORS' REPORT ADVERSE

WASHINGTON, March 6.—(AP.)—An unfavorable report on the renomination of John J. Esch, of Wisconsin, as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission was ordered today by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

The vote was 7 for and 10 against.

Esch's nomination was opposed particularly by Senators from the southern coal states because of his change of vote in the lake cargo coal case whereby the railroads serving the Pennsylvania mines were permitted to reduce their rates to lake ports, thus increasing the differential in favor of the Pennsylvania fields as against the mines in West Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee.

The roll call as officially made public follows:

For the nomination: Gooding, Idaho; Couzens, Michigan; Fess, Ohio; Howell, Nebraska; Dupont, Delaware, and Watson, Indiana, Republicans, and Bruce, Maryland, Democrat.

Against the nomination: Goff, West Virginia; Pine, Oklahoma; Sackett, Kentucky; Metcalf, Rhode Island, Republicans, and Pittman, Nevada; Dill, Washington; Wheeler, Montana; Mayfield, Texas; Black, Alabama, and Wagner, New York, Democrats.

STILL HOLDS POST

During the Senate controversy over his re-appointment, Commissioner Esch has held his place on the commission and has acted in all of its deliberations by virtue of a recess appointment given him by the President during the Christmas adjournment of Congress.

This situation will continue, under usual procedure, in spite of the Senate committee's action today. Should the Senate sustain the committee, however, his place would be automatically vacated.

FARRELL, Pa., March 6.—Council will be asked today to obtain an option on a suitable tract of land at the outskirts of the borough for an aviation field.

SUES FOR BALLOT PLACE

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, March 6.—Counsel for Ralph Beaver Strassburger, millionaire Norristown publisher, today filed a petition for a writ of mandamus with the Dauphin County Court, asking the court to compel the secretary of the commonwealth to permit Strassburger to file petitions for his candidacy as Republican delegate-at-large.

John A. Geyer, Harrisburg city solicitor, filed the petition for Strassburger's counsel.

Strassburger's petitions were refused by the State Elections Bureau on advice of the attorney general's office because they do not carry the publisher's signatures. He is in London.

Plans have been made to secure Strassburger's signature from London by radio photograph, via the Radio Corporation of America in New York.

Strassburger's place on the Republican ticket was taken by W. D. B. Ainey, of Montrose, at the last minute yesterday. Ainey is expected to withdraw if the Dauphin County Court grants the publisher's application for a mandamus compelling the Secretary of the Commonwealth to admit his petitions. The radio signature, if secured from London, will further clarify matters, it is believed.

Meanwhile, although the elections bureau is no longer open for filing, there was a long list of petitions yet to be tabulated and announced.

TWO AGAINST REED

Two Republican candidates filed in opposition to the renomination of United States Senator David A. Reed, but party leaders said they did not consider Reed's comparatively little known opponents seriously. They are William S. Adams, Harrisburg hotel manager, who seeks the nomination as a wet and a pro-labor candidate, and William C. Harper, of Philadelphia.

According to the petitions already recorded, there will be no contests for state-wide offices in the Democratic party. Because of the last-minute rush to file petitions, there will be numerous papers placed in the hands of the election bureau officials in person and by mail which had not been tabulated when their office closed late last night.

The Labor and Prohibition parties also filed complete state-wide slates. Labor voters have two contests on their hands, Charles A. Waters, the Republican candidate for auditor general having also filed as a Labor man for that office, and Mrs. Henrietta Additon, of Philadelphia, opposing Benjamin Thomas, also of Philadelphia, for state treasurer.

WOMEN FILE

Women candidates for various offices were the subject of considerable political interest as the filings closed. Mrs. Worthington Scranton, of Scranton, well-known society woman and Republican leader, found a fight in prospect for her membership on the state committee. Her opponent is Mrs. Margaret Jadwin, also of Scranton. Mrs. Scranton's name will appear on the ballots twice, as she is a member of the state "big seven" delegates-at-large to the national convention at Kansas City.

Miss Agnes Hart Wilson, daughter of William B. Wilson, rival of William S. Vare for a seat in the United States Senate, was unopposed as Democratic candidate for Congress from the Sixteenth District. In the Fifteenth District Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, wife of the former Governor, has a hot fight before her in an effort to wrest the Republican nomination for Congress from Louis T. McFadden, the incumbent and chairman of the House Committee on Banking in Washington.

CANDIDATES

Following are the candidates of the Republican, Democratic, Prohibition and Labor parties for state-wide offices:

Republican—U. S. Senate—David A. Reed, Pittsburgh, incumbent; William S. Adams, Harrisburg, and William O. Harper, Philadelphia.

State Treasurer—Edwin Martin, Washington.

Auditor General—Charles A. Waters, Philadelphia, and Frank B. B. Thompson, Philadelphia.

Judge of the Superior Court—William D. Porter, Pittsburgh.

Democrat—U. S. Senate—William N. McNair, Pittsburgh.

State Treasurer—Mrs. Henrietta Additon, and Benjamin Thomas, both of Philadelphia.

Auditor General—Charles A. Waters, Philadelphia, and John Brophy, Pittsburgh.

Judge of the Superior Court—Sidney B. Miller, Altoona.

Republican candidates for Delegate-at-Large are—W. D. B. Ainey, Montrose; William S. Vare, Philadelphia; Gov. John S. Fisher; Andrew W. Mellon and James J. Davis of Pittsburgh; Marion Margery Scranton, of Scranton, and Franklin P. Booth, of Pittsburgh.

Democratic candidates for Delegate-at-Large are—Clinton W. Clader, Allentown; Anna Ewing Cort, Latrobe; Lillian D. Bergey and Cornelius Haggerty, Jr., Philadelphia; Gertrude Sumner Ely, Bryn Mawr; Thomas J. Minnick, Jr., Philadelphia; John A. Riley, Sugar Notch; J. Houston McCollough, Philadelphia; Norris Hoover, McConnellsburg; John A. McSparran, Furniss; Robert M. Foster, State College; E. Lowry Humes, Pittsburgh; Edward B. Chairman Worden and Vice President Lesher, of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, called on Senator David A. Reed this afternoon. Firmly, although good-natured, Mr. Worden declined to answer any questions.

COMMITTEE IMPRESSED

The Interstate Commerce Committee considered the sub-committee's report for nearly two hours.

At the conclusion of the meeting Senator Gooding said the committee was greatly impressed by the report. The members asked many questions, he said, and there was unanimity of opinion that the conditions disclosed were deplorable.

was a fence timber, one end covered with bloodstains and strands of hair.

County detectives were told by Squire Charles Saddler that Yarsavage had come to his office last night searching for his 12-year-old son. The man said he was living on the South Side, near Pittsburgh, but formerly had lived in Russellton and thought his son had returned to his former rooming house. It is believed Yarsavage also may have been seeking employment in a mine operating with nonunion workmen.

Deputy Sheriff G W. Hutchison found the body. He said he had heard reports of a fight and, investigating, was led to the victim by the trail of blood.

The barking of a dog helped detectives and state police establish the time of the attack. Albert Heile, a farmer whose acres adjoin the chapel cemetery, reported that his dog had set up barking at 10 o'clock last night and continued until the body was found.

Company failed to make complete settlement. When payments stopped and nothing definite as to further payments could be obtained, according to the statement, the Pittsburgh Coal Company, on March 2, notified officials of the Bertha company that unless the account was paid the plaintiff company would take judgment the following day.

"However," the statement reads, "judgment was not taken until the following Monday, for the amount of principal and interest—$2,322.61."

The statement says further that "the action of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, in this case, was not influenced by any other reason than a desire to protect its own interests, and the same course would be followed with any other account which was similarly delinquent."

TAKE FULL POSSESSION

The receivers in each proceeding was directed by the court to take complete possessions of the respective properties and continue to operate until further order of the court, and to act in association with any ancilliar receivers that may be appointed for property of either concern outside the territorial jurisdiction of the Federal District Court.

The bill of complaint against the Bertha Consumers' Company sets forth that the company has outstanding capital stock, common and preferred, in hands of stockholders, aggregating $9,118,071.61 par value; that it owns 1,200 acres of Pittsburgh vein of coal in Pennsylvania; 1,000 acres in West Virginia and 11,000 acres in Kentucky, and has mines with a total capacity of producing 4,000 tons of coal daily.

The bill also cites that properties of the company are bound by lien of mortgage and trust given by the company to the New York Trust Company and second mortgages to the Farmers Bank and Trust Company, Indiana, Pa. It is also cited that in addition to the bonded indebtedness of $2,500,000 the coal company has other outstanding obligations of $2,454,000, but that its assets are greatly in excess of its indebtedness, and while solvent, has been unable to meet its obligations owing to the depressed condition of the coal business.

MORIN FAILS TO ENTER RACE FOR CONGRESS

REARS ALIBI IN TORCH MURDER

International News Service.

NEW YORK, March 6.—"Dr." Louis Clement today established a perfect alibi proving he was in New York the night Margaret Brown, Park avenue governess, was burned to death in New Jersey, according to the police.

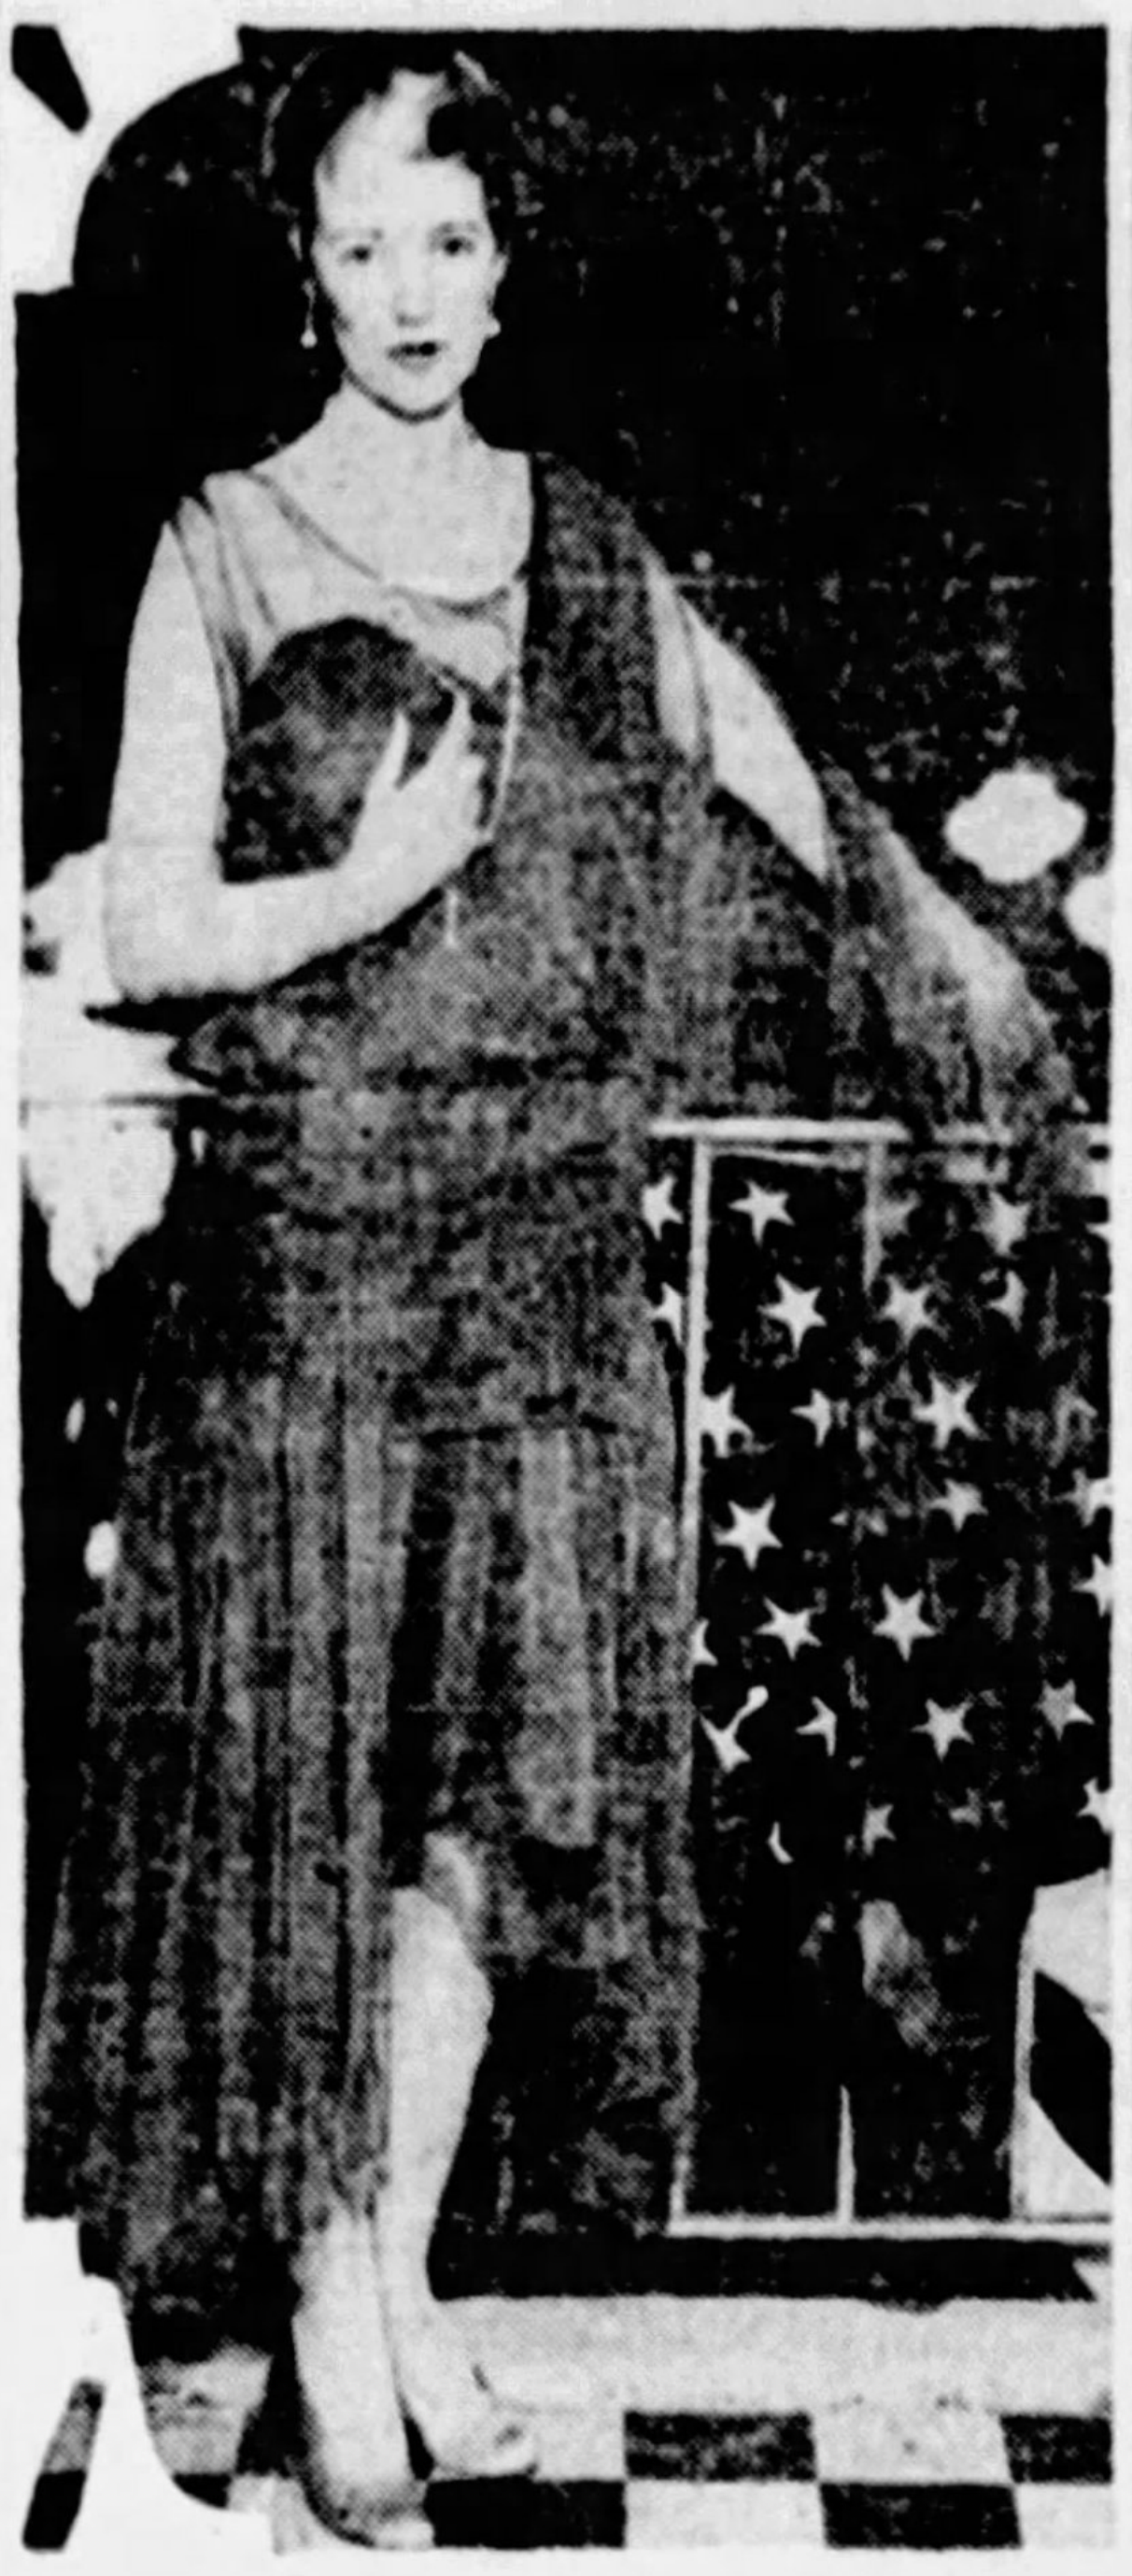
Since Clement's voluntary surrender, detectives have found the former suspect was at work as a dishwasher in a Nassau street cafeteria, when Miss Brown's body was discovered.

The register of the Columbia lodging house, 289 Fulton street, Brooklyn, showed Clement went there from his work and occupied a room the entire night, paying 25 cents. The remainder of the tentative case against Clement crashed to earth when Mrs. Elizabeth Amelia Miller, intimate friend of the murdered governess, confronted the prisoner and stated positively he was not the man whom she had twice seen in Miss Brown's company.

However, Clement was held for arraignment on a charge of grand larceny brought by his wife, Theresa Flower Van Norden, known to vaudeville as "Musette, the Dancing Violinist." With a lawyer, Mrs. Van Norden met her husband in police headquarters, and served papers on him in an action for divorce.

Seeing his shabby condition, she readily consented to supply him with a suit and overcoat left in their home. But she told Inspector Coughlin she will press the larceny charge, based on the alleged theft of a $600 diamond pendant.

NEW STYLES SHOWN -:- AT STORE OPENING



IDA ROI ANDERSON

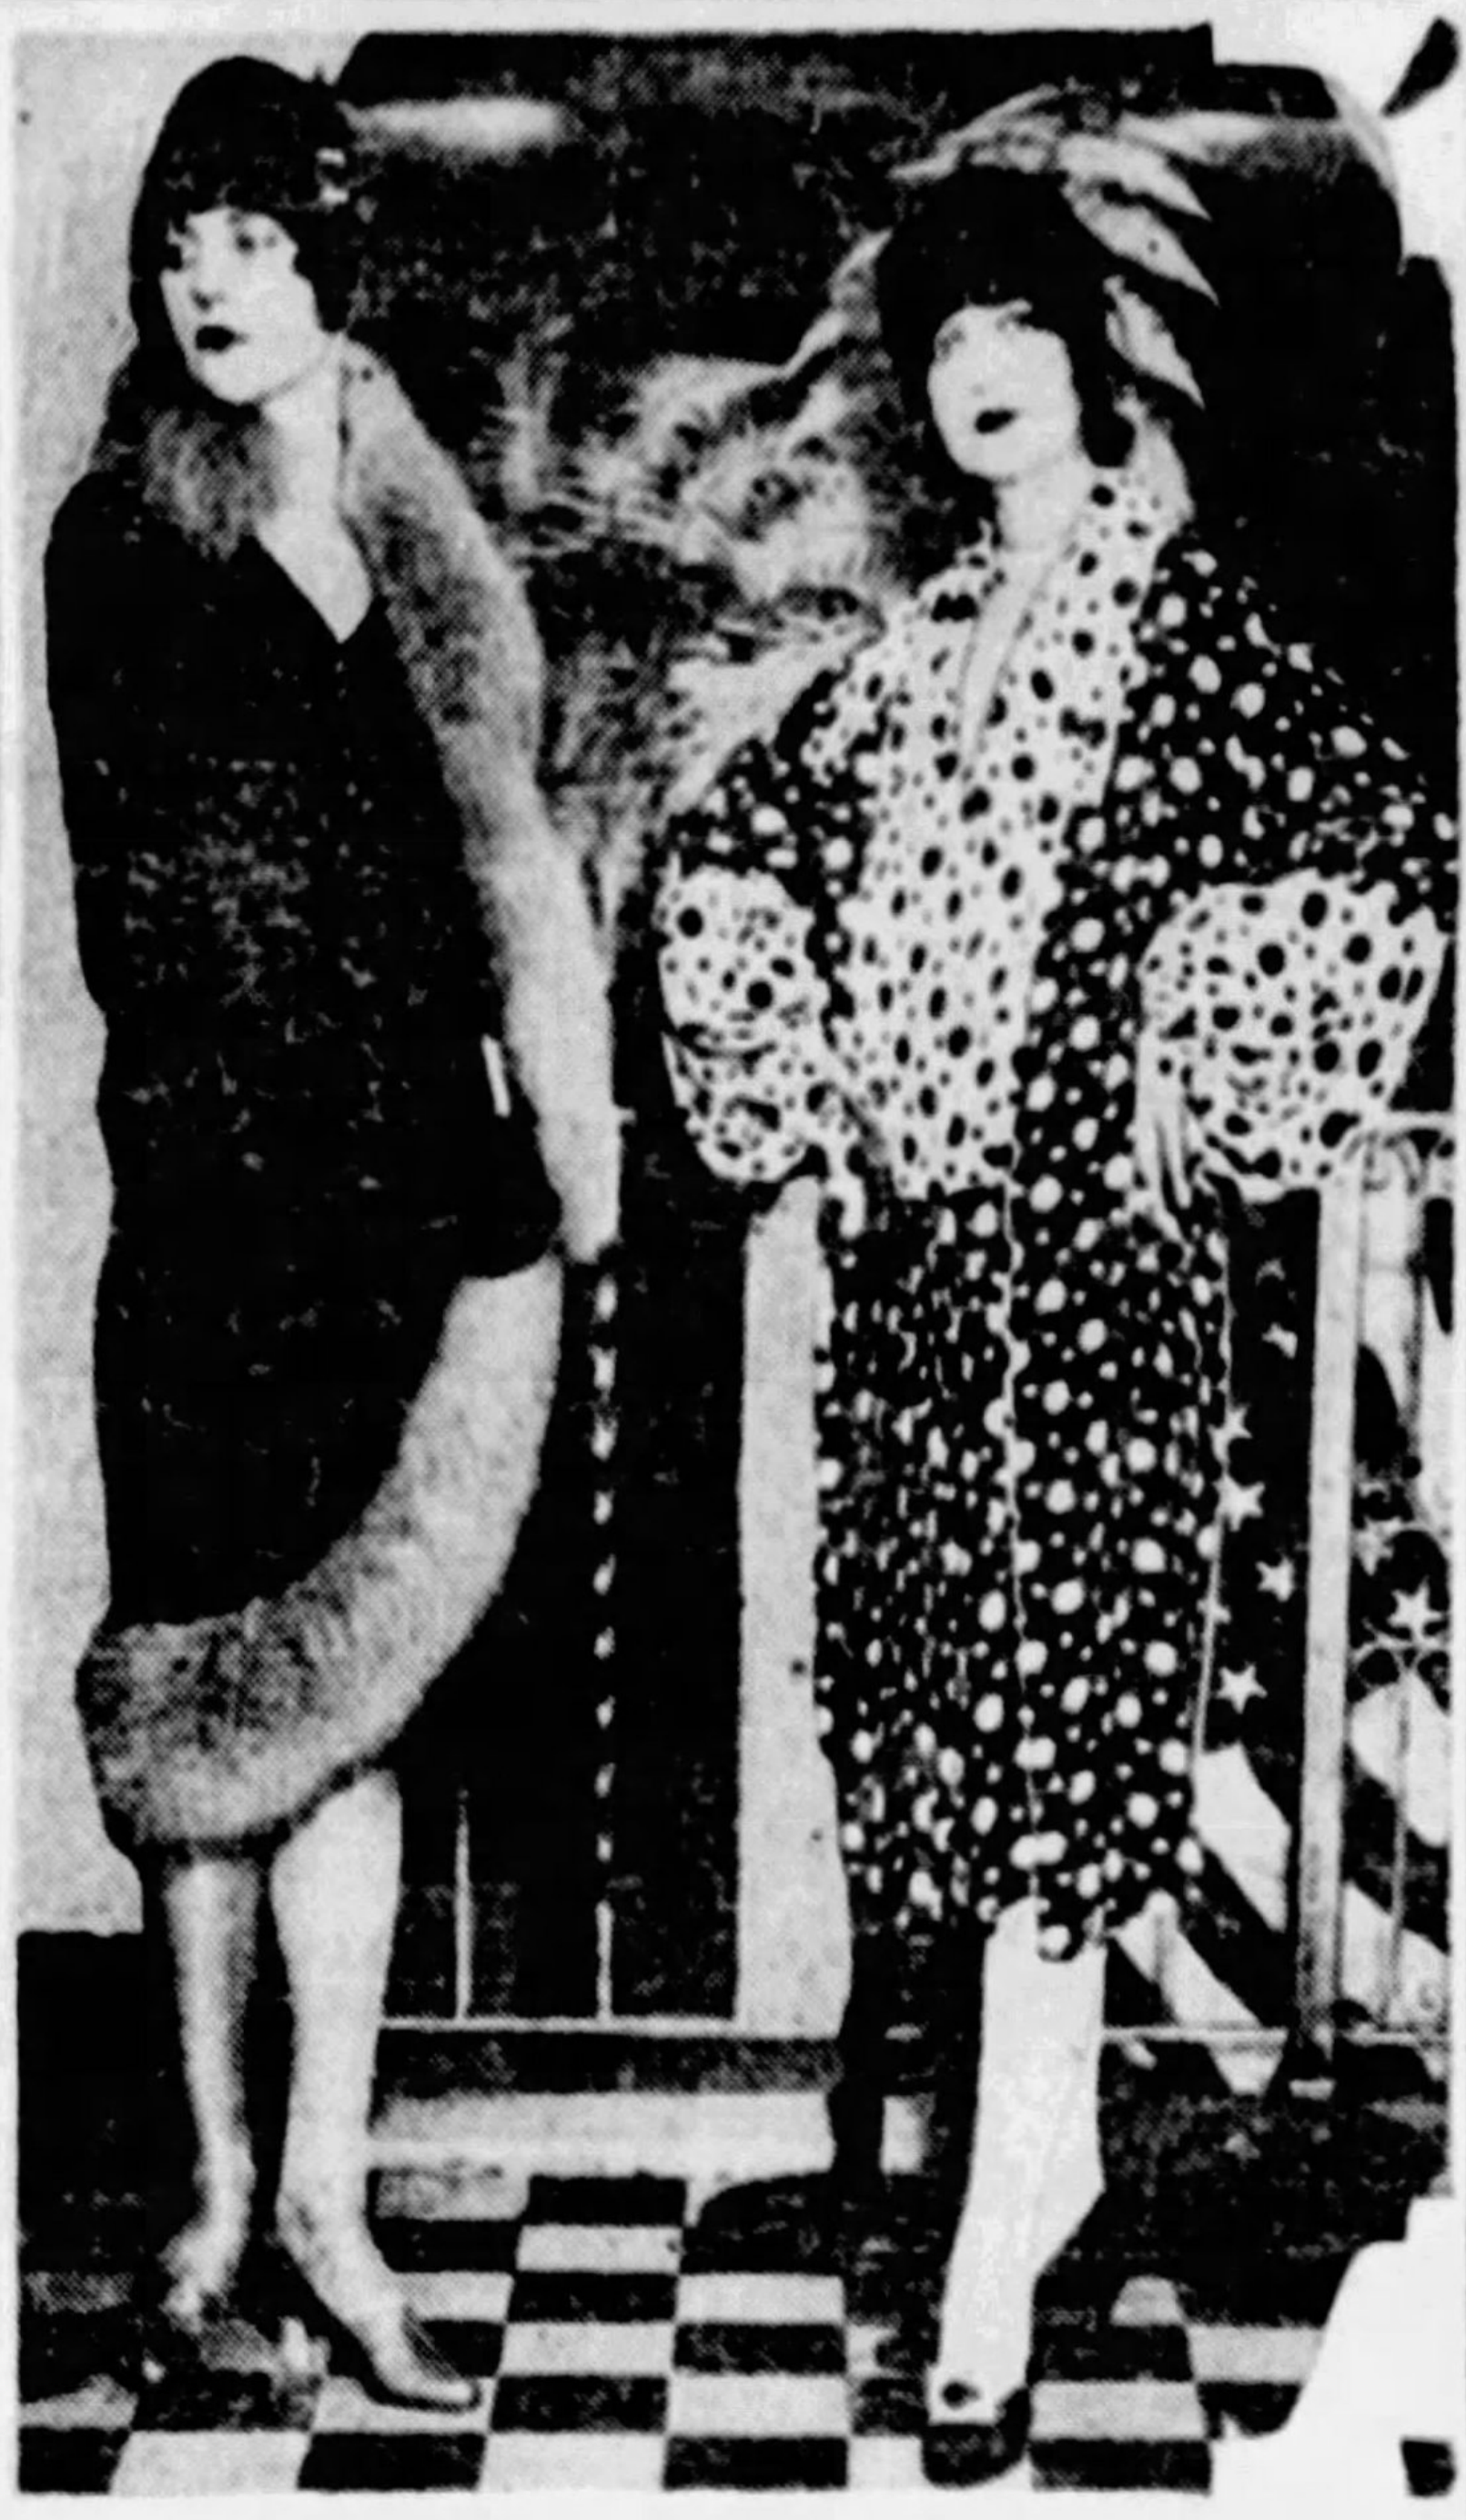
ISABELA AXLEX

One of the charming frocks that were displayed by Miss Axlex, one of several beautiful models who had quite a busy day.



MISS AXLEX AND GLORIA COWLES

A beautiful carrette model dress and a beige fox wrap were displayed by Miss Axlex and Miss Cowles and many eyes followed the two models as they displayed the apparel. It was estimated that 50,000 persons visited the new store yesterday.

WITHDRAWAL SURPRISE TO HOUSE COLLEAGUES

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS,
Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Failure of Representative John M. Morin of Pittsburgh to file for renomination in the celebrated "Strip District" came as a surprise to his Pennsylvania colleagues in Congress, although this course was suggested in his formal statement of last Saturday in which he announced that he would not oppose Senator David A. Reed in the state primaries.

Morin in withdrawing his name from consideration in the senatorial contest made no mention of his plans for seeking re-election to the House, but it had been assumed generally that he would be found in the race for his present position, despite the heated opposition which he faced.

The Pittsburgh member was not at his office early today and could not be reached for a statement.

He announced in the press gallery that he had not filed for re election.

According to word being passed around in explanation of his move not to enter either the senatorial or congressional contest, he will be "taken care of" at the expiration of his term by the Mellon interests and the Republican organization of the state. This, it was suggested, means that he, in all likelihood, will be tendered some important Federal position.

In the end both of the leading political camps in the state, that headed by the Mellons in Pittsburgh and the Vare machine in Philadelphia, were anxious to have him eliminate himself from the senatorial race.

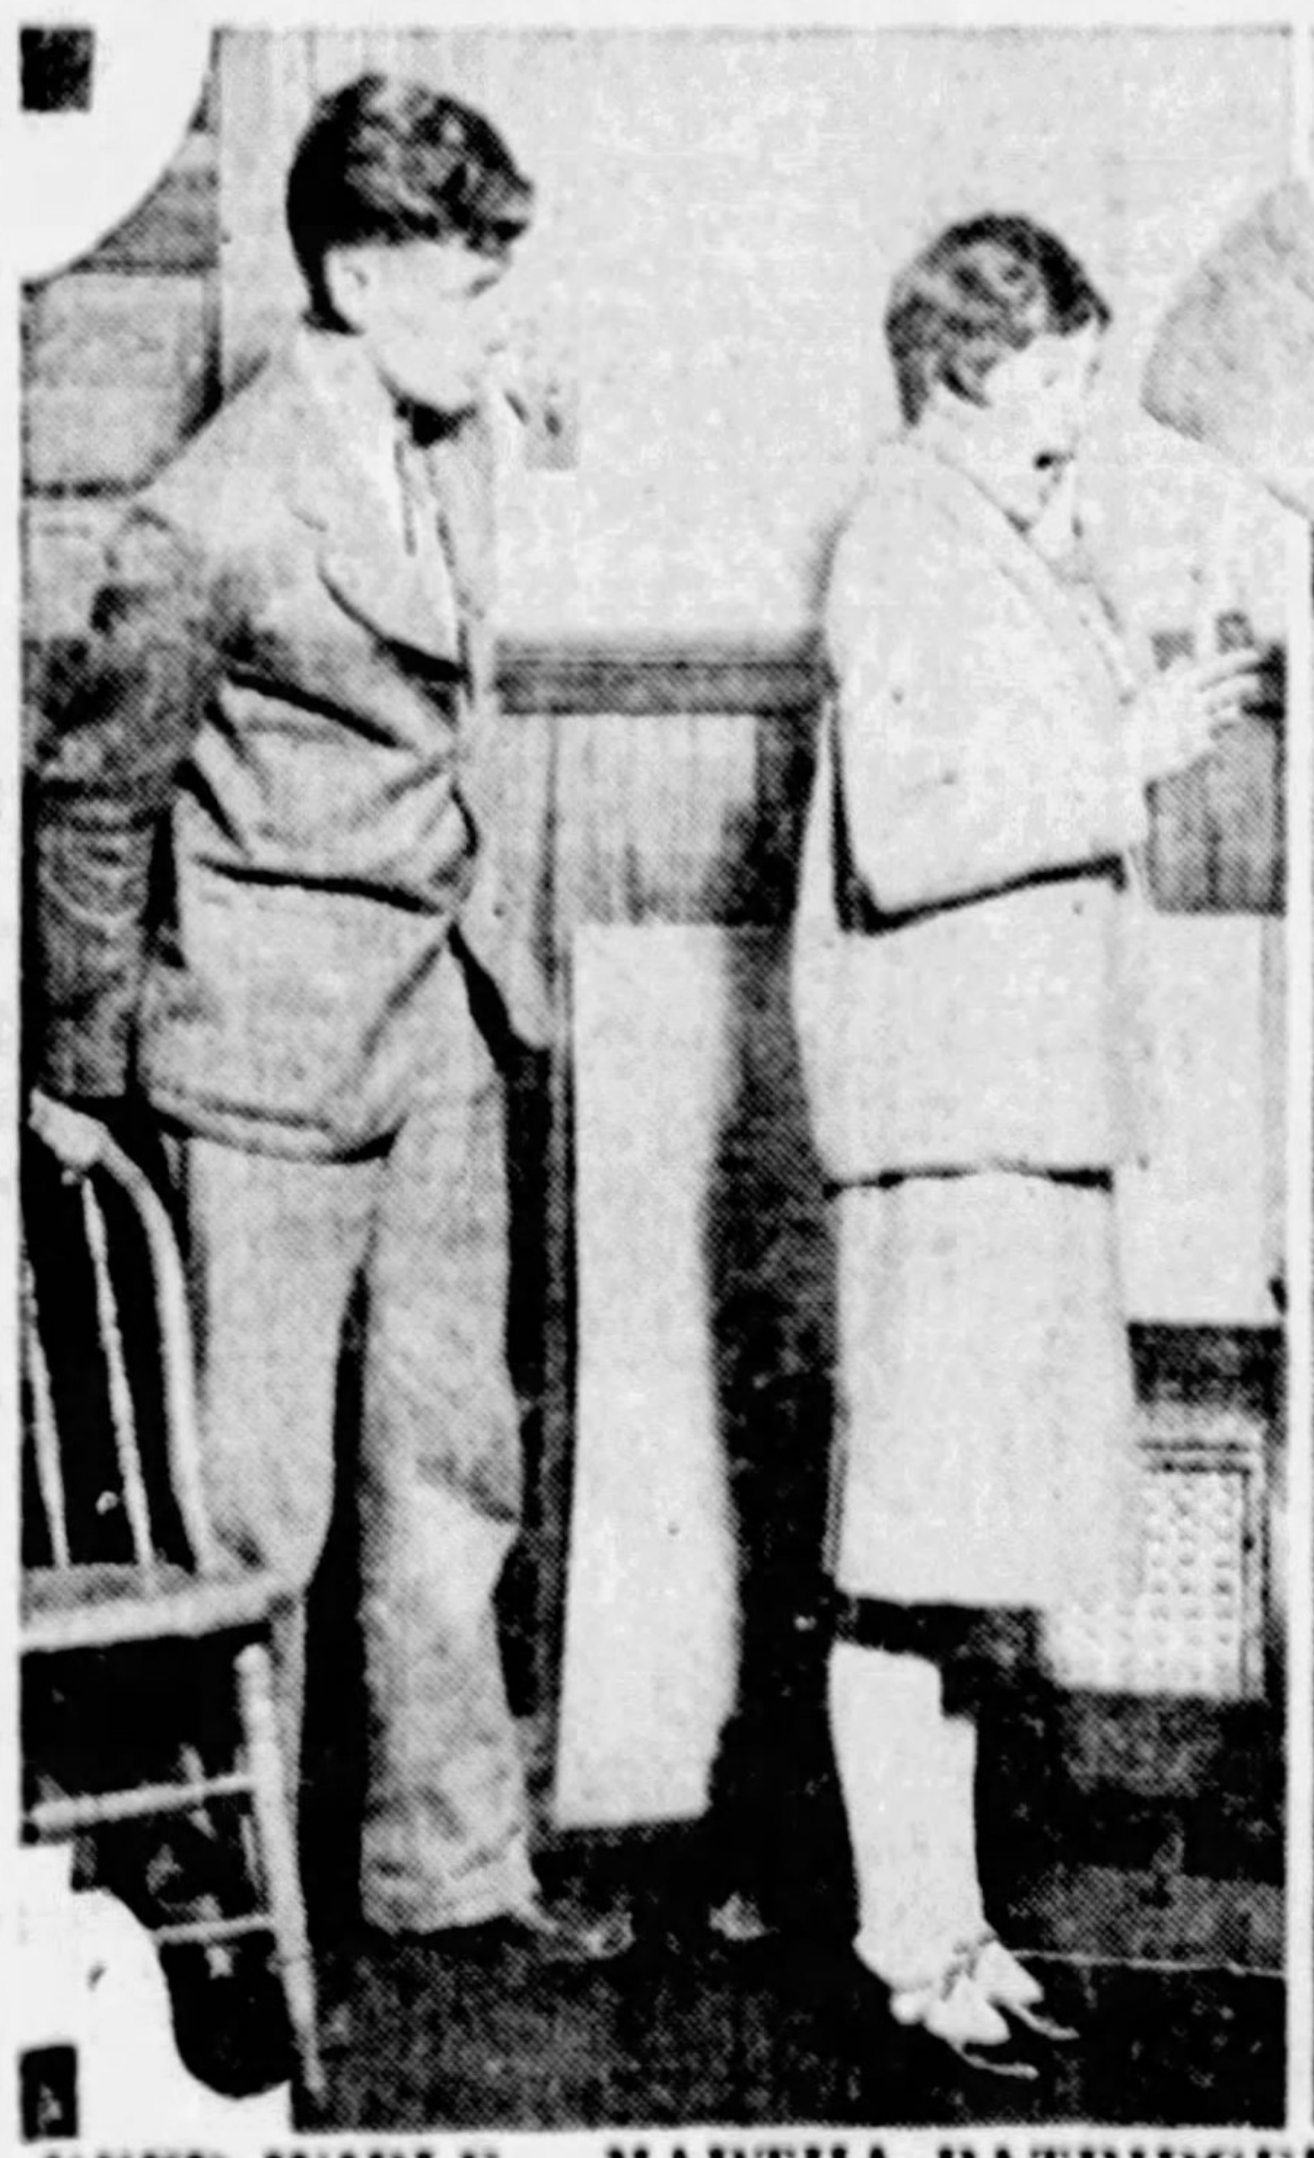
SOUTH SIDE BOY, WOMAN BITTEN

A woman and boy both residents of the South Side are suffering the bites of a cat and dog and the two animals are being kept under observation for 10 days. The victims are Mrs. Mary Herrington, of 203 South Main street and Michael Romtola, 13, of 1409 Bingham street. The woman was bitten by the cat Saturday and the youth was attacked by the dog yesterday.

SHARPSVILLE MAN DIES AFTER HE SWEEPS SNOW

SHARPSVILLE, Pa., March 6.—A few minutes after he had finished sweeping snow from the front porch of his home, Robert McDowell, 81, died yesterday while resting in a chair.

CHURCH SOCIETY TO PRESENT FARCE



REED WIBLE MARTHA PATRIDGE

Ah, see the sneer on the unfaithful sweetheart's face as he looks on indifferently while the beautiful movie actress swallows the poison. Reed Wible, 801 Grandview avenue, is the "villain" in this piece. The beautiful damosel is Miss Martha Patridge, 115 Maple Terrace. Confidentially, she was foolin' him, or that is, she will be, because the contents of the bottle weren't poison at all. You know how it is with movie actresses. They must get temperamental.

ELEANOR KAUFMAN MARY KENAH
WILLIAM DICK

"Bashful Mr. Bobbs," hero of the farce which the Christian Endeavor Society of Mt. Washington Presbyterian Church, Grandview boulevard and Kearsarge street, will present Thursday and Friday nights of this week in the church gymnasium, is having a hard time escaping members of the fair sex (and why.) William Dick, 243 Bigham street, was caught by the photographer as Eleanor Kaufman, 58 Southern avenue, and Mary Kenah, 141 LaBelle street, sought him.

GRACE DIETRICH
RODNEY SNODGRASS

And here we have a lovers' quarrel. When the photographer asked Miss Grace Dietrich, 107 Shiloh street, and Rodney Snodgrass, 444 Oneida street, to pose that scene in the play, they acted it so naturally that it looked like the real thing.

WILLIAM HOLMES "MRS. WIGGINS"

And here we have Miss Esther Heslip, 15 Natchez street, or Mrs. Wiggins, getting the fresh country lad "told" about bringing his muddy shoes into her spotless parlor. The "bumpkin" is William Holmes, of 413 Prospect street, whose antics, 'tis said, are capable of raising the rafters with laughter. Anyway, he "went over big" with the photographer and his fellow thespians looking on.

DOROTHY HOUSTON
WILLIAM DICK

Well, well, well. We really shouldn't be telling you this, because it doesn't occur until the very last minute. And right up until then, according to the script, it doesn't appear as though it ever will happen. Miss Dorothy Houston, 431 Augusta street, the heroine, wins out over the well-known movie star, which is, or isn't, the way true love always runs.

VELMA ESCAPES CHAIR

LIFE TERM IS GIVEN BLONDE

should not now pass sentence upon you?" asked the silver-haired, kindly-faced judge in tones a father would use in addressing his daughter.

"No, sir, I have not," replied Velma, her hands nervously clasping and unclasping a handkerchief.

JUDGE EXPLAINS

Then with Velma and Attorney Poulson standing before him, the judge launched into an explanation of his position before he announced his sentence.

"This matter of you being allowed to plead guilty to murder in the second degree did not come up suddenly," Judge Barnes said, speaking to Velma.

"It had been discussed by lawyers for both sides in chambers yesterday. The lawyers took the matter up with the court and asked what they should do under the circumstances.

"We went over the matter thoroughly. I also conferred with Judge A. G. Reynolds (the judge who presided at Velma's arraignment).

"This court and Judge Reynolds came to the conclusion that in view of the evidence the state could not expect to get a conviction of higher than murder in the second degree.

"I don't think this is the time for talking about this case. The community knows all about it. It has had its regrettable aspects. The mandate of the law is the most potent of all and that mandate has to be fulfilled.

"Never before in my career as a judge have I sentenced a woman in a case of this kind.

"The law says that the punishment for second-degree murder shall be confinement in the reformatory for women for the rest of your natural life. That is the sentence the court imposes upon you."

A flush mantled Velma's neck. Her lips twitched, and she seemed to collapse. When she returned to her seat, the matron, Mrs. Cora Nash, patted her soothingly on the shoulder. Then her father came over and they cried softly together the father's arm around his daughter's slim shoulders.

FATHER SUFFERS

Van Woert remained with Velma until they escorted her back through a tunnel to her cell in the little red jail back of the courthouse. She will remain in this cell until she is taken to the reformatory at Marysville, O. Velma's mother was not in the courtroom when sentence was passed. She is ill in her home in Cleveland and was unable to come to court this morning. Her husband telephoned her and told her how Velma accepted the verdict.

"It was the best thing under the circumstances," said the father. "I certainly am going through hell."

Attorney Poulson said he doubted if Mrs. Van Woert would live had the case gone to trial and all the lurid details brought out. He said Velma may not have been able to stand the ordeal, either.

"I'm happy over the outcome," said Poulson. "It was the best thing to do after all the muck that has been brought out."

Prosecutor Paulin had no comment to make, asserting that what transpired in court spoke for itself.

The sudden termination of the case was a surprise and Painesville was seething with speculation as to the reasons that prompted the state to accept the lesser plea. Velma had been indicted on the charge of murder in the first degree and, had she been tried by a jury and convicted, she might possibly have been sent to the electric chair. As it is now, she is eligible to parole after serving 10 years in the reformatory.

The frail blonde Velma weighs less than 110 pounds and how she was able to beat down her six-foot, 200-pound husband has been a subject of much discussion. Young West was a former football player and a splendid physical specimen. Yet the 110-pound Velma, according to her own signed confession, struck him with a claw-hammer and knocked him down four separate times.

The killing, she declared, was unpremeditated, yet, after it was over she quickly changed her clothes, went to the kitchen and washed off traces of the blood on her hands. Then she jumped into her green roadster and went to the bridge party at Cleveland.

Velma's story of the murder, as told by Sheriff Edward Rasmussen, who obtained the confession from her, was substantially this:

"Eddie and I quarreled because he would not take me to the card party. He wanted me to stay at home. It was about six in the evening when we quarreled. Suddenly he struck me.

"HIT AND HIT"

"I saw the hammer lying there on the shelf. I had been putting up some draperies that day. I just saw it, so I picked it up and hit him with it. He fell down. Four times he struggled up and each time I hit him. And he fell again, once or twice, I'm not sure. Then he lay quiet. I didn't want him to get up and come after me, so I tied his hands behind his back with wrapping cord, and I tied his feet together at the ankles. Then he seemed to come to himself, so I rolled him over and hit him again on the head with the hammer. At last he lay still. Then I threw a quilt over him. I changed my dress. I went downstairs and took the car and drove off."

HELD CAPTIVE, SHE SAYS

Held captive at 1723 Forbes street and forced to entertain men, police say, Mrs. Rosa Carpis, 21, would not testify against her alleged captor, Angelo Korides, 38, of 605 Wylie avenue, while he was present in Morals Court today.

With Korides ordered into an ante room, Mrs. Carpis, who is separated from her husband, declared Korides had beaten her into submitting to his plan.

Korides was held for court by Magistrate A. D. Brandon, who declared: "Twenty-five lashes on your back every week for the next 10 years would be fitting punishment for you."

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil as a substitute for calomel to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c, 30c and 60c.

BOOTLEG WAR SEEN IN KILLING

A woman, whose identity was not disclosed, was taken to city detective headquarters today for questioning in connection with the murder of John Spehar, Butler street saloonkeeper, slain at the garage of his home, 4520 Stanton avenue, early Sunday.

Accompanied by Detectives Edward Sweeney and Frank Dodson, the woman was taken into the private office of Detective Inspector Clyde S. Edeburn.

The detectives are seeking more light on events preceding the crime and believe that the woman can give additional facts as to Spehar's activities.

HINT AT BOOTLEG WAR

The theory that a bootleg war was behind the killing has been strengthened, it is said, by information obtained today by detectives. Spehar had been threatened several times, it is said, to "lay off" territory of rival bootleggers and to stop underselling. Spehar, it is said, ignored these warnings.

Three days before the murder a German police dog of Spehar was poisoned.

The automobile in which two of the three murderers drove away from the scene of the shooting was recovered yesterday by Patrolman Martin Cochrane and Harry Sweeney in front of 7223 Butler street. This machine was reported stolen from Harry Slavkin, of 5504 Margaretta street, early Saturday evening. Patrolman Clarence Lenger gave chase to the fleeing murderers, firing at their machine, but he was forced against a curb and the machine he had commandeered was wrecked.

Ada Paggi and Giovanni Martinelli

The Young Men and Women's Hebrew Association presented Giovanni Martinelli and Ada Paggi in the closing concert of their series last night. This series of concerts has given us consistent delight because of the high artistic standard of the soloists, and if last evening's concert was planned for popular appeal and to display a magnificent operatic tenor we cannot complain against the sheer brilliance of the singing.

Martinelli sings much like Caruso, only in quality of voice did they differ. His lower range is fortunate in its full baritone resonance which make excellent foundation for his high voice. Gorgeous high C's were flung at us by the dozen, and, if they had no musical appeal, no one could remain unconscious of their beauty nor unaffected by their vitality. The singer sacrifices diction for tone in many instances, and one's impression is rather of volume of tone, purity of emission, than of intelligent union of that tone with sentiment or musical feeling. In a larger hall or behind a full orchestra musical values would have been improved. His songs were all unimportant, but he was generous enough to add to scheduled operatic airs "E Lucevan le Stelle" from "Tosca," the popular air from "Rigoletto" and the lament from "I Pagliacci," all of which he sang with tremendous fervor.

Ada Paggi, mezzo-soprano, assisted the tenor, and, like him, was most successful in her operatic music. Her voice has a rich contralto rather than soprano timbre, it is flexible, but not entirely free in its upper register. The audience favored her with much applause, to which she responded with a very good reading of "Stride la Vampa" the Gypsy's song from "Trovatore" and that supreme test of diction, "Clavelitos." After her duet with Martinelli, both singers added a duet from the second act of "Trovatore." Salvatore Fucito played accompaniments.

MOST DANGER FROM DRUGS IS FOR WHITE RACES

SMUGGLED DOPE PERILS NATION

By WINIFRED BLACK.

WINIFRED BLACK

NEW YORK, March 6.—"The greatest danger in opium is not for the Oriental,

"It is for the white races,

"If the white races do not wish to be completely demoralized we must stamp out this evil. The Japanese are the only Orientals who are not dominated by the West,

"That is because they do not use opium,

"If the white people do not want to degenerate, they must suppress drugs,"

That is what Sugimura, Japanese delegate to the Geneva conference, thinks about the American "dope" situation,

What are we doing here in America to stamp out this terrifying menace?

We have in the last few years passed some very good laws—laws regulating the manufacture of "dope,"

American factories make just enough narcotics to provide the necessary amount for legitimate medical use,

And then, they stop,

We have stringent laws against smuggling and against selling—those laws are not always enforced—but we have them,

The whole purpose of these particular laws is to prevent the illicit use of narcotic drugs,

They contain no provision for those unfortunates who through their own weaknesses or otherwise are victims of drug addiction,

We have not done a thing to keep the vice of addiction from spreading and addiction to narcotics is as contagious as leprosy. And more contagious than half a dozen other diseases that we guard almost with our very lives.

One addict in a community is a menace to the peace and comfort and happiness of the whole community.

What's the use of sending a boy to prison for using drugs and then let him out again with his drug appetite stronger than ever?—out to teach the vice to a dozen other boys of his own age.

What sort of economy is that?

The police declare that 60 per cent of the crimes committed in this country today are committed by drug addicts.

Sometimes the addicts rob and steal and murder on their own initiative—they want money for their "dope" and they'll do anything in the world to get it.

Sometimes the clever criminals who do not use "dope" choose "dope" addicts for their tools because they know how to handle a man whose mind and will and sense of moral responsibility have been rotted away by the use of "dope."

It is important to take care of drug addicts for two reasons.

In the first place, many of these addicts fell into the habit through illness and pain and hideous suffering.

They did what you or I or any other human being would do to get rid of torturing pain.

And when they did that—they made themselves slaves to "dope."

Is it humane? Is it decent? Is it civilized to treat these unfortunates as insane people were treated a hundred years ago?

Is it right to lock them up like wild beasts and let them die in agony alone and friendless and forgotten?

Can we call ourselves a civilized nation and let things like that go on as they are going on all over this country today?

And how about stamping out the drug traffic—as long as you have thousands of addicts seeking eagerly for a chance to buy or steal—"dope"—somehow, somewhere, anyhow?

Take the addicts out of the street. Take the peddlers out of active life—and you strike at the root of the traffic.

No addicts—no trade.

We've stopped our own legitimate factories, but we cannot stop the factories of other countries.

They go right on making "dope" and selling it to legitimate merchants who let it dribble out by way of the smugglers.

The "dope" ring is rich and very powerful.

It has its agents in South America and in Canada and in Holland and in England and in China and in Japan and in every part of the United States of America.

Rich men—powerful men—men who know the traffic from start to finish and who will fight to the last ditch to keep that traffic from being destroyed.

Some day the conscience of the world will stir and waken and then we shall have some sort of international understanding that will regulate the traffic in drugs.

Until that time comes the best thing we can do is to destroy the market in this country and the only way we can do that is to isolate the addicts.

It sounds like a tremendous job, doesn't it? But Representative Porter of Pennsylvania has thought out a plan that seems to be practical, humane and sane.

He wants the Federal government to open two farms—and take all the addicts out of the Federal prisons and put them in those farms.

When those farms are established, each state in the union can send its own addicts to the farm and pay just exactly the amount that it would take to support these addicts in prisons or jails or state hospitals.

The government has already decided to build two new Federal prisons. The money is already appropriated for the purpose—

Why not make these prisons into addict farms—to take care of the surplus prisoners in that way and handle the addict situation as it has never been handled in this country before?

They're doing that in Brazil. And they're beginning to do it in Canada. Are we going to be behind Brazil and Canada in our treatment of a tremendous national problem?

If you want to help put this new plan into operation, get your friends together and send a telegram to your Congressman at Washington. Tell him you wish he would support the Porter bill. Don't wait for somebody else to do this. Do it yourself.

Fifty thousand California clubwomen are taking the matter up today.

In Chicago the women's clubs are afire with the idea.

And in Boston dozens of different organizations have taken the matter up with the greatest enthusiasm.

That's practical work—that's the kind of thing that counts.

Are you going to do your part?—Do it today! Do it this very hour! And perhaps some mother's son and some mother's daughter will live to bless your name.

For it is the young people of this country who are in cruel danger of this insidious evil.

Old people—we must do what we can for them—but after all, their feet are turned to the sunset and it will not be long before their troubles are over.

It is to the youth of the country that we owe this protection and this determined battle against the most cruel, the most dangerous and the most treacherous enemy which has ever attacked the human race.

Telegraph today to your Congressman—and that would be doing something real!

A young woman at 55 has a 20 year old COMPLEXION

...how she obtained it

THE clear, fresh radiance that glowed upon her skin did not come from using cosmetics or having beauty treatments. She obtained it in Mother Nature's own way.

She was formerly bothered with indigestion and constipation. She became rundown and irritable. She suffered frequent headaches, slept poorly. Her skin became sallow. Facial blemishes became more numerous and more prominent. She consulted her physician. He told her she could not expect to regain her former clear complexion, until she had ridded her system of the poisons, produced through auto-intoxication—(self-poisoning).

He explained that pure, healthy blood in ample supply was the only means of obtaining a natural healthy, rosy, clear skin.

8 Weeks' Treatment Only $3.00

The "Zilatone" treatment was recommended to her. She obtained a package and read the 12-page leaflet contained in the carton. She was so impressed with its common-sense logic, the description of the formula and what should be expected from its use, that she gave it a trial. In two weeks she noted improvement. In 8 weeks her health was again normal, the blemishes had disappeared and her complexion was as clear as when she was 20. The total expense of this 8 weeks' treatment was just $3.00.

The above story was told us by a physician but for obvious reasons names cannot be mentioned. However, there are scores more women who have had like experiences with the Zilatone treatment.

What Is Zilatone?

Zilatone is a most remarkable preparation. It contains, in highly concentrated form, the identical elements which Mother Nature herself supplies to keep normal bodies in healthy, vigorous condition. It is an ideal stomach digestant and strengthener of stomach glands. It activates the liver to supply a normal flow of bile. It helps the pancreas to give off its intestinal digestive aids. The combined elements thoroughly clear the system of all waste matter and toxic poisons—permitting Nature once more to assert herself.

Test at Our Expense

Zilatone is sold by most every druggist, in most every place where this paper is read. If your favorite druggist is "short," he can obtain Zilatone for you in a few hours. Buy or place your order now for a 60-cent package containing 40 tablets—hermetically sealed. Read the 12-page leaflet enclosed. Try it as directed and if you are not extremely pleased, get your money back. In other words, you will be testing Zilatone at our expense.

Zilatone is recommended and sold in this city by All May's Drug Stores and other live druggists.

A good newspaper is like good clothes—it makes everybody take notice. Your ads in The Sun-Telegraph should be in often!

DENY TRAGEDY PAIR WORKED FOR 'S. A.'

Funeral services will be held tomorrow for John Faulds of West Homestead, who was fatally stabbed in his home Saturday night during a duel, police say, in which he shot to death his wife, Mrs. Mary Faulds. The services will be in the home of his son, Andrew Faulds of 259 Third avenue, Homestead. Burial will be in the Homestead Cemetery. Mrs. Fauls' body has been taken to the morgue and plans have not been completed for her funeral.

Commenting on a report that the couple had been members of the Salvation Army, Maj. H. W. Smith, general secretary for Western Pennsylvania, said:

"These people were not 'Salvation Army workers,' as has been published. They did attend services intermittently at Homestead, as anyone might attend church services anywhere, but about three weeks ago their names were dropped off the rolls there because of failure to attend the meetings and for other reasons."

Tom Sawyer, Mark Twain Hero, Dead

SPOKANE, Wash., March 6.—(AP.)—Tom Sawyer, whose pranks depicted by Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain) have caused millions to laugh and weep, is dead.

Mrs. Flavilla Pineo of Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, revealed here today that her brother, Thomas Sawyer, who died February 7 at Tucson, Ariz., and was buried in Bellevue Cemetery, Ontario, was the original of the famous writer's story.

Clemens, she said, first saw Tom Sawyer on a river boat on the Mississippi. Later Sawyer worked 25 years in helping to construct the Milwaukee Railroad through North Dakota and Montana. He went to Arizona in an effort to regain health.

The Plays Stage and Screen And Players

THE PITTSBURGH SUN-TELEGRAPH

Stars In "Diplomacy" Shine, Especially The Five Women, Drama Still Has Old Thrill

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

GEORGE SEIBEL

THAT a thriller after fifty years should still have power to thrill a large audience who know the secret springs of all the thrills seems to bear out the opinion once expressed by Walter Prichard Eaton—that Scribe and Sardou go into any language, into any land. "Diplomacy," played at the Nixon Theater last night by a cast as nearly perfect as any cast could be, proved that half a century of wear and tear had not impaired the mechanism of Sardou's stage technique, for the audience hung breathless upon each of the great scenes, awaiting developments with which they were perfectly familiar. And several times a sigh of relief seemed to go toward the stage as the knots of the plot were resolved one by one.

The play is virtually intact, although the costumes have been modernized most excusably, and though Lord Kitchener is dragged in with less excuse, and though the Countess Zicka's perfume has been changed from "opoponax" to "lotus bloom"—well, it is as pungent by any other name. With the structure of the drama adapters could do nothing, for that was built by Sardou with such precision that no one would dare tamper with it. With the minor details every successive revival has played ducks and drakes. Originally the actor who played Baron Stein was made up like Bismarck. Such incidental excursions into contemporary journalism are a great temptation in productions of this kind. Campbell Gullan, who staged this revival, has wisely restrained any such tendency on the part of his galaxy of stars. The result is a play almost perfect as a play played almost perfectly by players almost perfectly suited to their roles. Especially the women! Especially Helen Gahagan as the Countess Zicka. From her first scene with Baron Stein, in which she presents her extenuation of her past, to her last scene when she has been forced to confess her trickery, Miss Gahagan's work was a supreme triumph of the actor's art. You see her thinking.

This is no disparagement of the other women in the cast. Margaret Anglin did some delicious comedy as Lady Henry Fairfax, and Cecilia Loftus was no less delightful as the Marquise de Rio Zares. Frances Starr as the harrowed heroine played with the sincerity and restraint of a great artist, which she is. And Georgette Cohan in the minor part of the maid acquitted herself with as conscientious an art as if the play had been written for her. Every one did.

Especially the women! And this is no disparagement of the men in that remarkable cast. Perhaps the finest piece of acting was done by Jacob Ben-Ami as Orloff in the scene where he accuses Dora to her husband and brother-in-law. Charles Coburn played Baron Stein with marvelous suavity and force. Rollo Peters put real emotion into the rather conventionalized role of the husband, and William Faversham as his brother was most effective in gleams of sly humor. Somewhat broader were the effects gained by Antony Holles as Algy Fairfax.

Perhaps the best criterion of the excellence of this cast is in the fact that such a comparatively unimportant part as the hotelkeeper was put into the hands of Tyrone Power, one of the best of our American actors. He has a bit in the first act, done with sure strokes, and then he disappears. Georges Renavent and Gayne Ralph Bunker flit across the scene in similar momentary fashion. It is truly an all-star cast, though some of the stars flash by with meteoric speed. It seems such a waste of stellar glory. But it is also a waste of critical ink to cavil because a cast is too good. Let us simply be grateful for a fine play—a classic among thrillers—presented in almost flawless style.

DANCING AND COMEDY IN SHERIDAN SQUARE

Marianne Jaque and Albert Bonach, winners in the recent marathon dance contest held in Pittsburgh, are featured on the Sheridan Square stage. The Sandy and Douglas Revue, sponsored by Gus Edwards, is another feature. Adams and Rash appear as "the two-man quartet." They sing and chatter. Les Klicks offer a mechanical novelty, "The Enchanted Forest." Miss Ann and Mr. Frank sing. Jim Penman and His Page are seen and heard in "Jolly Moments." The photoplay is "Freckles," based on the Gene Stratton-Porter novel. The cast includes Hobart Bosworth, John Fox, Jr., and Gene Stratton. An organlogue and short screen entertainment complete the bill.

Katharine Cornell Gives Good Characterization In Dull Drama, "The Letter"

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

"The Letter," melodrama by W. Somerset Maugham, presented in the Alvin last night, turned out to be drab, draggy and dubious. Katharine Cornell, who had the leading role, had rather a sobby evening of it without sobbing overmuch. The distressed lady whom she portrayed was mournful as to type, but, although her demeanor almost constantly suggested a condition bordering on tearfulness, she did not get into actual weeping on more than one or two occasions.

The audience did not blame her for her state of mind, because it felt that any one of them would have been in a similar predicament had they done what she did—killed a man by shooting just as the curtain goes up. After that it was merely a case of finding out why she did it. As she explained it to the authorities, the man had attacked her and his life was the price of her honor. That was a perfectly plausible explanation and it would have been just as well had everybody taken her word about it. Then the audience could have got to bed earlier.

But her own lawyer, too alert, by far, wanted to be dead sure the prosecution would have nothing to base a case on. So he just picked at her and picked at her until he roused a suspicion among the poor lady's friends out in the audience, every one of whom thought she had served the dead chap his just deserts. Yes, he roused their suspicions that something was amiss and they stuck for four acts to find out what it was all about. And it hardly was worth the sticking, as far as the play itself was concerned.

It was just a story about a woman who had killed a man because he had deserted her and then she lied and lied and lied and then lied some more. And the ultimate result was that she got away with it because the story she told was the one that went to the jury. A letter, "The Letter" of the title, that would have incriminated her, was bought by her attorney, but had it gone to the jury it would have been all day with the lady who killed a man, not her husband, just because he found a Chinese woman more charming than herself.

As heretofore hinted, it is drab, draggy and dubious as a play, but the characterization, in the skillful hands of Miss Cornell and her excellent supporting company, is something that just has to be commended. Miss Cornell made her distressed lady very distressed, indeed, but she made the distress real and natural and convincing. Her art is above question, but she cannot supply what the author has failed to furnish—dramatic situations that ring true and sustained live interest. There are two big moments—one at the very beginning and the other at the very end. In between is mostly dull. Miss Cornell played her part well and so did others in the cast. Allan Jeayes, a very good actor, made the lawyer part a picture of incisiveness that helped a lot in keeping up some semblance of interest in the proceedings. J. W. Austin, as the husband, was all that could be desired and James Vincent, as a Chinese clerk of the lawyer, gave the play its only touch of comedy, a portrayal that aroused admiration.

The action of the play is on a plantation in the Malay peninsula and in Singapore.

A large audience witnessed the presentation, which was a benefit for the Drill Battalion-Detroit Club, Pittsburgh Commandery No. 1, Knights Templar.

"BROADWAY," 3RD WEEK IN PITT, AGAIN PLEASES

The third week of "Broadway" in the Pitt, announced as the final one for this attraction, opened last night, and, as far as appreciation of the audience is concerned, the success of earlier presentations of the melodrama was again in evidence. There is much comedy and much novel drama in this play of cabarets and bootleggers.

RELATES HOW TEN HERBS AIDED HER

Natural Ingredients of Famous Compound Seemed To Be What She Needed.

"Before I started taking Ten Herbs, I was in a terrible condition," was the statement of Mrs. William Hess, Route 1, Box 38, Finleyville, Pa., (near Pittsburgh), to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty

MRS. WILLIAM HESS

Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating this popular herbal compound. "My whole system seemed to be saturated with poisonous waste matter," Mrs. Hess continued. "I was constipated so badly that it brought on painful complications. Constipation developed a lazy liver, and my complexion became very sallow. I had dizzy spells and bilious headaches, and lost all ambition and energy.

"My appetite was poor, and I had to be very careful what I ate. The lightest kind of food would upset my stomach, and I would fill with gas and bloat until I would almost double up with pain. My nerves got so bad that I could not sleep at night. I tried different medicines, and every morning drank hot water and went through different exercises. Finally, I had my teeth removed, but with all this I did not find desired delief.

"One day a friend advised me to try Ten Herbs. I can honestly say that I had not finished the first bottle when I noticed a change for the better. My appetite improved, and I can enjoy meals without fear of misery afterwards—no more gas, bloating, or pains. My bowels became regular, and my liver and kidneys were toned up. Dizzy spells and aches disappeared, and my head became clear. My nerves were quieted, and I can sleep better. That drowsy, sluggish feeling left me, and my complexion has cleared. I feel better and stronger in every respect. I give Ten Herbs credit for this change in me, and gladly endorse your medicine to the public."

The Ten Herbs Man is at May's Main Store, 529 Liberty Avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine. Free sample given.

FATHER-SLAYER OF TWO BOYS TO BLAME WAR

KILLER OF SONS PLEADS NOT GUILTY

International News Service.

INDIANA HARBOR, Ind., March 5.—The horrors of Vimy Ridge and the Somme will be held responsible for the tragic plight of George Allen Chisholm, Canadian World War veteran, when he is brought to trial for the slaying of his two sons, George, 9, and Edgar, 7, his attorneys announced today.

Chisholm, who confessed that he had hurled his little sons into the Indiana Harbor Ship Canal, being driven to the act by the persistent "nagging" of his common-law wife, was arraigned yesterday in the City Court at East Chicago, Ind., and pleaded "not guilty."

He waived preliminary hearing and was bound over to the grand jury. Before the brief court session, Chisholm had appeared at the coroner's inquest, but refused to testify. He acted on the advice of his attorneys, Joseph Conroy, of Hammond, Ind., and A. A. Slipiak, of Gary.

The day's procedure was a complete reversal of the plan Chisholm had announced for himself the evening before when he calmly recited the details of the double murder. At that time he begged for a "quick death," declaring he would plead guilty and ask to be sent immediately to the electric chair.

His demeanor at the inquest and in court was as much in reverse as his plans. His resigned calm of the day before gave way suddenly to hysterical fear as he sensed the approach of the specter of death. He trembled and quaked, mumbling over and over: "This is terrible." Once he fainted dead away and had to be revived.

MINER WHOSE WIFE "TALKED" REPORTED FIRED

FIRED BECAUSE WIFE TALKED TOO MUCH

SENATOR HELPS

Mrs. Eva Barr, of Pricedale, told members of the Senatorial Strike Investigation Committee how hard it was to make both ends meet on her husband's pay in the mines of the Pittsburgh Coal Company. Bertha, the little girl next to the mother, had no shoes or stockings and Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, left, gave Mrs. Barr five dollars to buy clothing. Four hours after this photograph was taken, Charles E. Barr, the husband, says he was fired because his wife "talked too much."

COAL COMPANY HITS BACK AT WITNESS

PRICEDALE, March 6.—Because his wife "talked too much" to members of the United States Senatorial Strike Investigation Committee who visited here February 25, Charles E. Barr, was discharged from the employ of the Pittsburgh Coal Company four hours after his wife had testified as to her inability to get along on her husband's pay of $4.08 a day, according to an affidavit sworn to by Barr.

Barr has worked for the Pittsburgh Coal Company since November, 1926, he says in his affidavit. He was unable to earn enough to keep his family in clothes, he said, and his wife told members of the senatorial committee that she was compelled to keep one of her seven children home from school because she had no shoes or stockings. Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, gave the woman $5 to buy shoes for the child.

The senators visited the Barr home in the forenoon and at the end of the day, Barr says, Superintendent Charles Baughman came to him and told him he was "fired." He explained the necessity of holding his pob, Barr says, but Baughman's only reply was that he would have to "get out" because his wife "talked too much."

That means that the Barrs will have to look for a new home, as the house they occupy belongs to the coal company. Barr, in his affidavit, declares that he earned $4.08 a day for 20½ days during the last pay period he worked, and on payday he says he drew only $1 in cash, the balance having gone to the company store for food and rent.

J. D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Company, declared this morning that a checkup made by his office disclosed that Charles E. Barr is still working at the Pricedale mine. "Our production manager tells me that Barr is working today and has been working every day," Mr. Morrow said. "After the senators' investigation on February 25, our superintendent called Barr into his office and questioned him about his living conditions, but he did not discharge him, so far as I have been able to learn."

DANDRUFF
Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.

Your Kidneys Are Literally Sentinels of Your Health.
To Be Well See That They Function Properly.

YOUR kidneys! Do you realize what an important part they play in your bodily health and length of life? To be well the kidneys must thoroughly cleanse the blood of poisonous waste. Sluggish kidneys permit waste impurities to remain in the blood and cause slow poisoning of the system.

One is apt to feel tired and drowsy—to have a dull, nagging backache and annoying headaches and dizzy spells. That the kidneys are not working right is often shown by too frequent, scanty or burning excretions.

Assist the kidneys with a stimulant diuretic. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's increase the secretion of the kidneys and thus assist in the removal of the poisons of bodily waste. Are endorsed from coast to coast. Ask your neighbor!

Additional Stage and Screen News

CHAPLIN FILM WINNER

Charlie Chaplin's new picture, "The Circus," showing in the Penn, not only is a success as a creator of laughs, but it also impresses as specimen of art in farce comedy. If it is not the best picture Chaplin ever made, and many will argue that it is, it is good enough to class as ranking with his best. For the laughs, Chaplin has resurrected many of his early "gags," such as being chased by the 1928 model of the old Keystone comedy cop and plastering somebody with the open-faced pie, beloved of the hokum school of technic, but how he has changed these old gags! Oh, how he has changed them! "The Circus" is a scream from beginning to end, with a dash of sentiment here and there and an Emil Jannings etching at the end for a touching finale. Merna Kennedy is the leading woman, quite capable, too, and Alan Garcia is realistic as a hard-boiled circus proprietor. On the stage, Pat Rooney of the agitated legs, is the singing and dancing feature, assisted by Marion Bent and Pat, III. Collette Sisters, pleasing dancers, and the Five Harmaniacs, also are liked. "Tales of Hoffman," an overture, and an organlogue by Dick Liebert are in the musical program.

STANLEY'S STAR GILDA GRAY

Gilda Gray and her famous convoluting hips, which made her prominent on the stage as a shaker of grass skirts in the Hawaiian hula, are in evidence in two mediums in the Stanley, where she is presented on the screen as the star of "The Devil Dancer," and on the stage, where she appears in a dancing act that serves as an atmospheric prologue to the picture. The photoplay is a weird drama of the Orient, in which dances of the Far East figure prominently both as ceremonials and as a medium of entertainment. Miss Gray's role is that of the daughter of white missionaries, who, after the slaying of her parents, is brought up and trained as a ceremonial dancer—devil dancer—in Tibet. Her rescue, subsequent abduction at the instance of the sister of her rescuer, and the coming of an emissary to take her back to Tibet lead to the inevitable finale of the dancer in the arms of the lad who rescued her, well played by Clive Brook. Miss Gray's characterization also is well-drawn. Her stage act, quite elaborate, is marked by her appearance in costumes in which there is no hay skirt. Her dances and those of several assistants are appreciated. Phil Spitalny's direction of the orchestra in "The New World Symphony" meets with applause.

Erin Jackson, in the principal role. Miss Jackson is a comely young woman who is an instrumentalist as well as a clever dancer and singer. A song, "South Sea Moon," and a skit, "Broken Hearted," were among her contributions. Evelyn Murray and Anna Lang are singing and dancing soubrets. The comedians are Lew Lewis, Tommy Moran and Mack White. Tangara, dancer, is assisted in her specialty by a company of young women. Among the scenes in the burlesque is one in which a realistic rain storm is presented.

WILSON'S GANG IN ALDINE

Lew Wilson and his gang top the bill in the Aldine this week. Lew's boys, as a musical organization, are good, and he introduces a pair of feminine dancers, who register fair. Others acts on the bill include Wally Sharples and a group of assisting players who show versatility in vaudeville entertainment. The Du For Boys, Harry and Dennis, introduce some novel dances and an atmosphere of European capitals. The above mentioned Lew, and Madeline Wilson, heralded as his sister, in a feature skit, are quite entertaining. The Howard Girls are seen in what is billed "artistic novelties." The photoplay is "Dress Parade" and it features William Boyd. The picture amuses but William Haines has stolen the thunder from the West Point theme. But if you like parading cadets, the legitimate atmosphere of the historic military school and some interesting situations, "Dress Parade" satisfies. Short screen entertainment completes the bill.

RICHARD DIX PLAYS BANDIT IN GRAND

"The Gay Defender," starring Richard Dix, is the feature this week in the Grand. Dix portrays the scion of an aristocratic Spanish family, who becomes the Robin Hood type of bandit when he is accused of the murder of his sweetheart's father. The action takes place in the early days of California. Richard, in spite of his moustache and sideburns, isn't very impressive in his newest role. But there's lots of excitement and heroics in the film. The hero shows dexterity with knife, pistol and whip. What's more he gets the better of a bar-room full of armed desperados. And the picture ends in grand movie manner, with vigilants arriving from San Francisco in the nick of time, removing the villain from the scene and leaving Richard singing love songs to the girl of his heart. A Lupino Lane comedy, "Half Pint Hero," news pictures and "Topics of the Day" complete the bill.

CAMERAPHONE FILM IS "DRESS PARADE"

The principal attraction in the Camerphone this week is "Dress Parade, a photoplay of cadet life at West Point," William Boyd is starred. He portrays Vic Donovan, a small town hero who takes his swelled head to West Point. A swelled head, like a soap bubble, can burst. And it does. The picture was filmed on the actual locale of its scenes. Bessie Love is the heroine. Short film entertainment is on the bill.

Millicent's Hubby Late First Day On New Job

Universal Service.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Arturo P. Ramos, the new husband of Millicent Rogers, was five minutes late at his first day at work.

"See here, young man," admonished Donald C. Appenzeller, who, with Col. J. Philip Benkard, is Ramos' partner in the brokerage firm of J. P. Benkard & Company, "we will dock you if you don't come in on time in the future."

When newspaper reporters began to crowd around the door Ramos was so absorbed in his work that he "had nothing to say."

When he went to lunch he told reporters it seemed childish to ask questions when he had only been in the job half a day.

"Gunboat" Smith, who is helping initiate Ramos into the mysteries of business, remarked that Ramos "is a nice fellow" and added that he "could clean up in the movies."

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action. It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

WITHERS' OP'RY VERY FUNNY

Charles Withers' travesty on the old-time variety show is the principal feature of the vaudeville program in the Davis this week, and is really very funny—from the asbestos curtain with the hole burnt in it, to the closing announcements by the Rube Impresario. There are too few acts of this sort in present-day vaudeville, and too many soft-shoe hoofers, all alike. And few of these are as agile and graceful as Carol Chilton and Maceo Thomas, whose gayety and smiles are reflected in their dancing. Then there is fine comedy of the sophisticated sort by Ann Butler and Hal Parker, with just a dash of pathos at the end. A miniature revue is furnished by Vannessi and Sonny Hines, with the Gamble Boys furnishing the music—pleasing without superlatives. Frank Evers, assisted by Greta, does some clever wire dancing, while Felton and Fields are two comedians whose quick-fire dialogue has some novel twists. On the screen Will Rogers as "A Texas Steer" goes to Congress and gets his Dam Bill passed, though he loses his pants. The usual comedy and news reel complete a program above the average in merit.

LEGLESS ACTOR IN HARRIS

Zimmy is the stage feature in the Harris this week. Legless, he performs feats that the great majority of normal humans consider difficult, eating and smoking under water, and balancing himself on his two fingers and thumbs. He wasn't crippled in the war or in an accident, but was born that way, he announces from the stage. Preceding his appearance is a short film that shows him driving an automobile and playing golf. The Picchiani Troupe, acrobatic tumblers, speed through about six minutes of difficult feats. One turns three complete somersaults in the air and comes to a sitting posture in a chair. Elkins, Fay and Elkins are a trio of blackface comedians, who display lots of versatility. Inglis and Davis make their comedy rather boisterous. Hill and Margie chatter and draw feminine hats on a big board. Will and Lill Kaufman sing and caper. Lill, we would say, is the feminine Lon Chaney. The photoplay is the picturization of Gene Stratton Porter's "Freckles." An organlogue and news pictures are on the bill.

POLICE TRAP ROBBER IN JEWELRY STORE

Why We Behave Like Human Beings

by George A. Dorsey, Ph.D., LL.D.

Women More Human Than Men; They Live Longer, Too

More Males Born but Females Overtake Them Numerically; Differences in Degree

The interesting fact was related yesterday by Dr. Dorsey in The Sun-Telegraph that man has traded for a nose the scent organ which nature provided for use in discovering his mate. That short people mature earlier in life than those of greater stature was another revelation. And when the new order of life enters was described.

Woman's Hair Not a Sex Factor

CHAPTER XXIV.

SHORN of her locks and dressed in man's costume, woman is still woman. Yet many times she has passed for a man—as a sailor, a soldier, a coal miner! Her femininity tends to disappear beneath the male's makeup. The two sexes differ in degree rather than in kind.

GEORGE A. DORSEY

The assumption that women are not as "adult" as men has no basis in fact. Yet we keep hearing about the "infantile" character of woman! Her body does more nearly resemble the infant's than does the male's, but this only states half the truth. In all that is essentially "human," her body is more human than man's. The adult may be less infantile than the adult female; he is also less essentially human.

The typical female skull is so delicate and smooth that sex can be postulated 19 times out of 20. It has none of the asperities, ridges and prominences which mark the skull of the male. The bones of her face, especially of the jaws, are much more "human" than are the corresponding bones in man's jaws.

The weight of the skull compared with the weight of the long bones shows this interesting progression: Greatest proportionate weight of skull, children first, women next; then short men, tall men, apes. In weight of skull compared with that of thigh bones, the advantage again is with woman.

Revealing Girdle

Our pelvic girdle is in some respects more "human" than the skull itself. It is the distinguishing sex trait in the skeleton. To the trained observer there is no mistaking the pelvic girdle of a female for that of a male. A moment's reflection will show why this should be so. In man, the pelvis supports the abdominal viscera and continues the support of the upright body from the legs. To perform these two functions it became modified in two directions: broader, by expansion of the iliac crests; more compact and substantial, by a greater, broader sacrum. The sacrum is the key of the pelvic arch; it carries the backbone, and incidentally the entire upper part of the body. Woman's pelvis has traveled further than man's in this regard. Her breadth across iliac crests is proportionately greater than the depth from pubic symphysis to top of sacrum. Her sacrum also is more distinctively human in its great breadth.

The two bones which form the basin of the pelvis—of which the iliac crests are easily felt beneath the skin at the sides of our abdomen—meet in front to form the pubic symphysis. The joint of the symphysis is made by a strong ligament which yields under pressure. In the male pelvis the ligament is narrow; in the female, wide. The slope of the pubic bones below the joint is also greater in the female, an additional factor in enlarging the outlet of her pelvis.

Brain Size Limited

Can our pelvic girdle become more "human"? The upper rim might become better adjusted to support the body, but a girdle so narrow as to prevent childbirth stops variation in that direction. This seems to set a limit to the size of the human brain at birth. In most still-born deliveries the head is too large to pass the bony outlet of the pelvis. We may assume that the limit of brain size at birth has been reached.

Man's pelvis is long, narrow, strong; woman's, broad, shallow, delicate, roomy. Her thighs are relatively greater. Her carriage differs from man's because the heads of her thigh bones are farther apart. As she transfers her body from one thigh to the other in walking, she must make a greater effort. Her pelvis is a compromise between an arch to support viscera and an outlet to make childbirth possible.

Women among so-called savages are notoriously as strong as men, although there is always a division of labor between the sexes. The most splendid human bodies I have ever seen were those of black women working under extremely primitive conditions in gold and emerald mines in South America. Their backs, shoulders and arms spoke of great strength, but there were no bulging muscles. Even apart from their breasts, their bodies were unmistakably "feminine."

The luxuriant head hair of women of European descent is not a mark of sex; it is the barber that makes—or made—the difference. Chinese and Indians were proud of their hair and had as much of it as their spouses. Head hair is a race and culture and not a sex factor.

More Males; Shorter Lived

Sex differences are strongly marked in brain size among man and apes. The male gorilla's brain is 18 per cent larger than the female's; the orang's, 14 per cent; the chimpanzee's, 8 per cent; man's, 12 per cent. But the disparity is due to general disproportion in size between the two sexes. Structurally the brains of the two sexes are the same, and as compared to weight of body are heavier in women than in men. If a relatively large brain is a "human" trait, the brain of the child stands highest, woman next.

More males are born than females; in the so-called white races, about 106 males for every 100 females. Yet woman's longevity counter-balances the disproportion; at the age of 50, unless migrations or wars upset the calculation, we may expect to find as many women as men.

Differences between the two sexes, yes. The male specializes in the direction of brute strength and the courage that goes with it; the female retains her youthfulness in body in general and especially in face and neck. With age some women begin to appear neutral, halfway between man and woman.

But the vicious element in such phrases as "Woman's proper work" and "Woman's true sphere" is the assumption implied of lack of capacity. To assure that her capacity for intelligent behavior or human adjustments is less than man's is biologically and physiologically absurd.

Comte's idea is better biology and sound psychology: "Between two beings so complex and so diverse as man and woman, the whole of life is not too long for them to know one another well and to learn to love one another worthily."

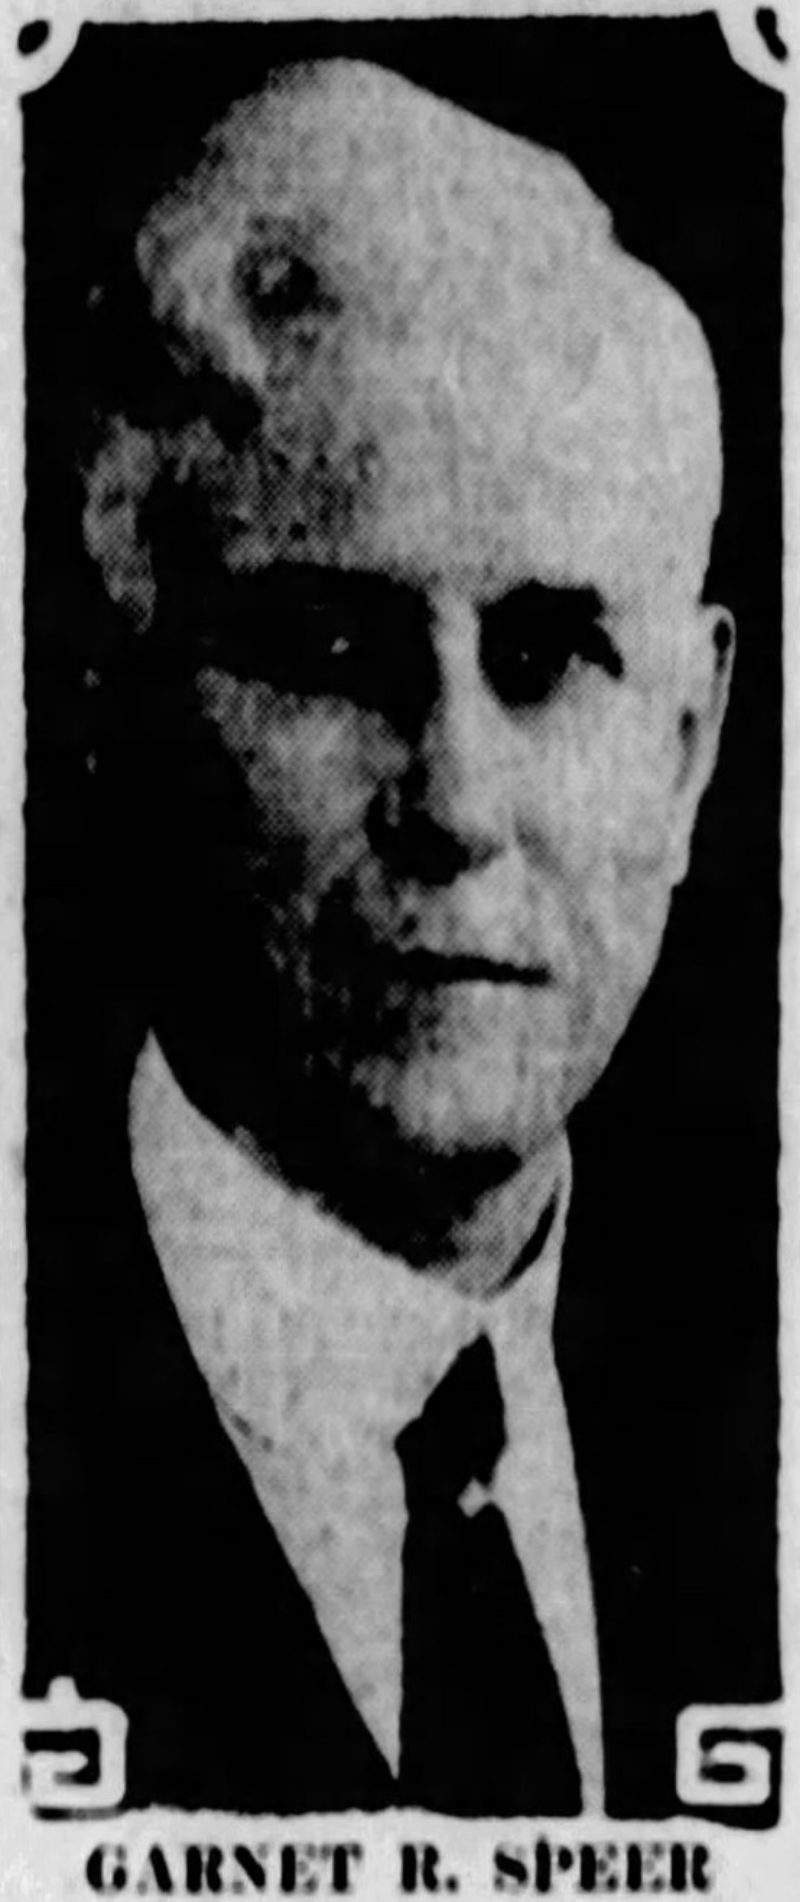
Candidate



GARNET R. SPEER

Urging more efficient and stricter election laws, Garnet R. Speer has announced his candidacy for representative to the General Assembly from the Fifth District. He is supported by various civic and church organizations of the Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth Wards.

SPEER OUT FOR LEGISLATURE IN FIFTH

An equitable reapportionment of the legislative districts of Allegheny county to give fairer representation to sections where the population has increased is advocated by Garnet R. Speer, who yesterday announced his candidacy for representative from the Fifth District, composed of the Twelfth, Thirteenth and Fourteenth wards.

In his announcement Mr. Speer stated he favored an additional representative from the Fifth District, which, with a heavy population, is now entitled to only one member, while several districts with less population have two.

Mr. Speer said that, if elected, he would vote for:

"More efficient and stricter election laws, voting machines based on laws that have proved effective, betterment of our public school system, continued road building without burdening our people with bonds, social justice, particularly safeguarding women and children; enforcement of all laws, economy in state government consistent with progress, a metropolitan district, embodying a square deal; promotion of civil service for public office, revamping laws referring to Allegheny county government."

Mr. Speer served as a member during the sessions of 1925 and 1926 from the Twelfth District, of which he then was a resident. He lives at 5222 Beeler street.

TRAP THIEF IN JEWEL STORE

Trapped in the basement of a jewelry store at 906 North Homewood avenue after, police say, he had looted display cases of jewels valued at more than $1,260, George Holtman, 22, of 7270 Kedron street, was disarmed and arrested early today. Police say that he threatened them with a revolver when they cut off his escape.

Patrolmen William K. Porter and James H. Craig noticed something moving about the rear of the store, which is owned by David Appleman, and investigated and discovered the looted cases. A call was sent to the Frankstown avenue station and a squad of police under Lieut. Nunzio Marino answered and surrounded the building.

A search of the premises was made and Holtman was found, police say, in a corner of the basement, his revolver drawn and determined to fight. He ordered his captors away but they closed in on him and overpowered him. At the station house, where he was charged with being a suspicious person, he admitted robbing the store and said he had committed the robbery alone.

Arraigned before Magistrate W. J. Soost, Holtman confessed, police say, to eight other robberies, obtaining loot worth about $5,000, and was held for further investigation.

Bank Sued For Bomb Injury

The Farmers Deposit Savings Bank was named defendant in a $35,000 damage suit filed yesterday in behalf of Carl F. Sinn, 38, of 3815 Baytree street, North Side, a depositor, who charges that as a result of the bombing of the bank, August 24, 1926, his sight and hearing have been impaired and his face has been permanently scarred. Sinn claimed he was injured when particles of marble were blown into his face.

The bank bombing was laid to William Chowick, Michigan ex-convict, who was blown to bits when he set off a bomb after being refused $2,000, which he demanded from a teller. George Orton, a special bank policeman, also was killed and a score of others injured. The suit was filed by Attorney H. Stewart Dunn, representing Sinn.

SEEKS LIBERTY BRIDGE TRAFFIC SURVEY FUND

A survey of the traffic over the new Liberty Bridge is being planned by Public Safety Director James M. Clark, who yesterday asked Council for $350 with which to hire men to do the work. He plans to study the situation immediately before and after the opening of the structure to handle the traffic as effectively as possible.

MOORE BUYS N. Y. DAILY MIRROR

NEW YORK, March 6.—(AP.)—Alexander P. Moore, former American ambassador to Spain and former publisher of the Pittsburgh Leader, will re-enter the newspaper publishing business with two tabloids—the New York Daily Mirror and the Boston Advertiser. Purchase of the papers from the Hearst organization was completed yesterday.

Mr. Moore announced the purchase in the presence of Victor Watson, managing editor of the Mirror. Mr. Moore said he may add to his news enterprises with the tabloid as the field of development. Baltimore may be one of the cities in which he may purchase a paper, it was intimated.

In a statement, Mr. Moore said "In public affairs a liberal patriotism, as opposed to a restricted partisanism, will be the course of the Daily Mirror. The well-founded opinion that America is the best governed country in the world will not blind the Mirror to errors in legislation or unjust administration of laws. There will be positive and courageous criticism of everything that conflicts with the public welfare or the rights of the individual."

Mr. Moore declared there would be no radical changes in the personnel of the two papers.

Post Mortem by Will Shows He's Langley Fan

ALBANY, Ga., March 6.—Caught a tail wind and flew in here from Montgomery, 160 miles, in 70 minutes. Brought by Maj. Weaver and Lieuts. Cote and Ott. I would have been a whole day making the trip on the train. Just read the Smithsonian Institution's explanation about the Wright flying machine. They say the trustees decided Langley's machine could have flown first, but didn't.

WILL ROGERS

I could have flown to France ahead of Lindbergh, but I just neglected doing it. I had a lot of other things on my mind at the time. Those trustees remind me of the senator that votes on something and then hears from back home afterwards. These heard from the whole of America when that plane went to England.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

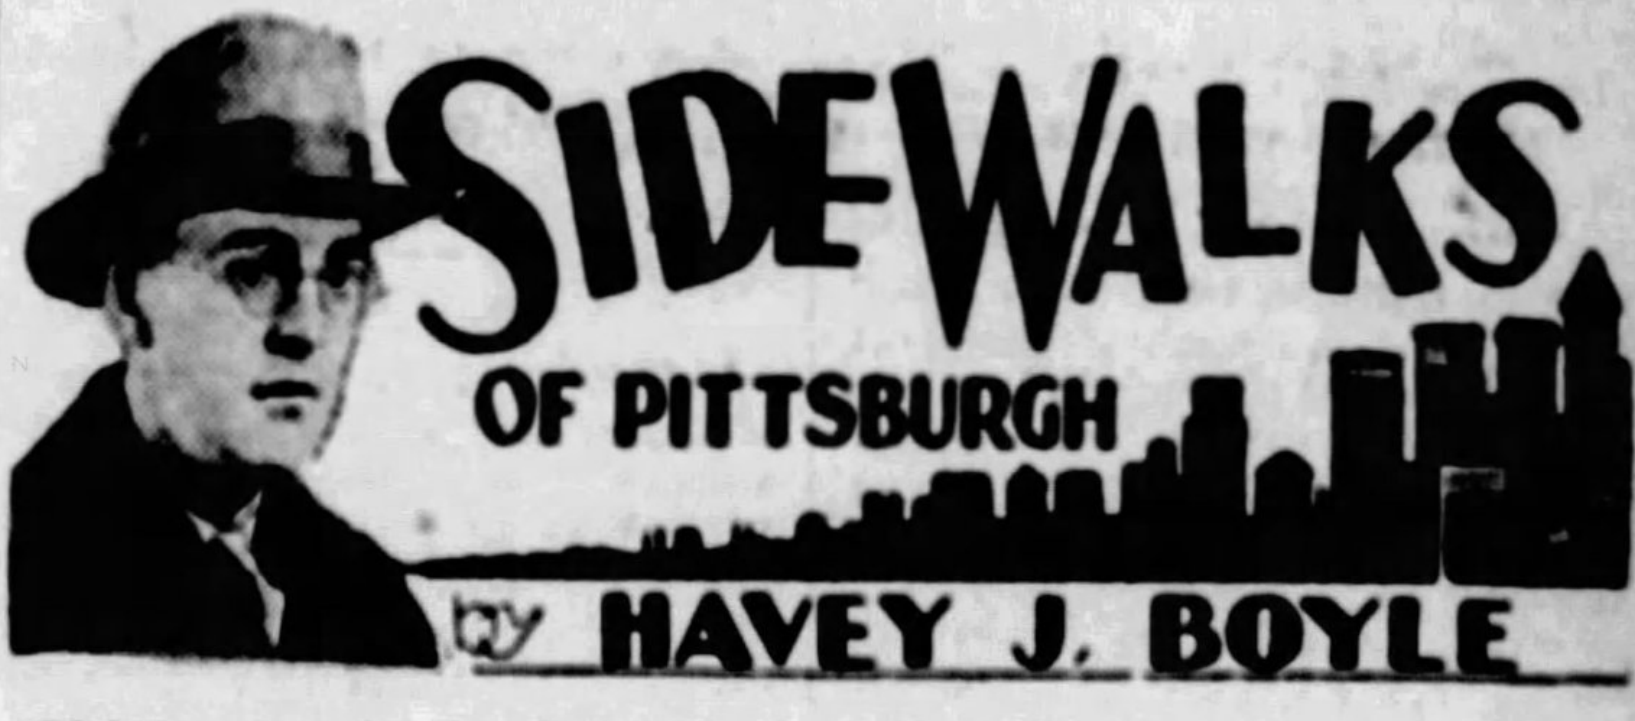
$15,000 DAMAGE SUIT SETTLED

Walter Wrigley and Elizabeth Wrigley were awarded a verdict of $15,000 by consent in their suit in Common Pleas Court against the city of Pittsburgh for damages to their property by the opening of North avenue through to Bidwell street.



SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by HAVEY J. BOYLE

CAN spring be far behind? In a street car a man was reading: "Garden Roses—How to Make Them Grow and Bloom."

OF INTEREST to the boys who wear hard hats is a notice which comes to this desk of a Pittsburgh concern which makes calorized pressed steel pots. It will be just the thing for summer wear as these steel pots are immune to oxidation up to temperatures of 1650° F. Apparently it's a hot number.

• • •

ACCORDING to Joe Donley of the Pittsburgh Railways Company a man could open a sizeable store with the articles left on the street cars by absent-minded passengers. There would be enough in cash, too, to take care of the payroll for a month or so.

• • •

JUDGING from the list of articles turned in daily by the honest street car conductors the citizenry figures that the street car is just as safe to leave things in as a safe deposit box. On a day which saw rain in the morning and fair weather in the afternoon the railways company boys can figure on getting a new supply of umbrellas.

I LEFT MY BASS DRUM ON THAT CAR
WHAT ?

The only part of Mr. Donnelly's story which surpasses understanding is that chapter which tells about the fellow who left his bass drum in the street car.

STREET car conductors have a much easier time of it than they used to have. The closed cars, the seats provided for them, and the pass system all have alleviated woes which were common to the veterans of the local lines some years ago.

THE bane of the street car man's existence some years ago was the summer car. This was an open car with a running board stretching from platform to platform. On the open suburban cars the poor conductor had to crawl in the rush hours along the sideboard no less than three times, nailing the elusive nickel, besides showing a rare genius at remembering faces that had paid and those that had not paid on the previous collection.

THERE used to be what was known as the Blue line running from town to Carrick. The summer car would load up downtown, move out Forbes street to Brady street, cross the South Twenty-second Street Bridge, and then wind its way up the South Eighteenth street extension.

On this trip the conductor had to collect the fares first on the way across the bridge. He struck a transfer point at South Nineteenth street, and as the car started up the hill, he made another pilgrimage along the running board, stretching, diving, and plunging along. At the top of the hill he struck another central loading point and once more he repeated the operation. By the time he reached the end of th line he looked like Red Grange after a tough game.

TO ADD to the dilemna, sometimes, an inconsiderate rain would fall, dampening money, clothes, transfers, and reports. There was seldom any let-up on that line, as Southern Park was then appealing to the younger generation of the time and Sundays, instead of bringing an off-day, simply saw streams of people hanging onto the running boards.

THIS story may be checked up by any of the following: Mr. Al Mattern, Mr. Meyers, Mr. Robert Bleiel, Mr. Tom Carey, Mr. Buck Hughes, Mr. Ed Borneman, to mention only a few of the veterans who still have wound stripes from the days of the summer cars.

JERRY The Epic of a Girl Who Had to Wait. by Elenore MEHERIN

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Jerry King, good-looking, charming and 19, meets Saxon Rhodes, a young architect and falls in love with him at first sight. Her fascinating mother, Marza, warns her that idealists like Saxon make unsatisfactory husbands. In spite of the fact that Jerry sees Saxon kissing Tess Willi, who has a great deal of money, she still clings to her ideal and refuses a marriage proposal from Heine Ross, a wealthy young suitor. Saxon runs across her while she is sketching and later they kiss each other rapturously in the moonlight. He takes her to lunch and Tess Willi comes to their table and makes a date with Saxon. Marza tells her she hopes she is not counting on marrying Saxon—that he has not enough money. Wondering if she had better give Saxon up, she gets a reassuring note from him. Saxon tries to argue himself into a belief that love is the only thing that counts and gaily makes plans with Jerry for their future.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

HER voice wavered. She looked out to the water—the ocean that was high tonight and splendid with the searchlight from Tait's going far out to meet the silver moonlight.

"When did Mac Phail say this, Jerry?"

"Last week, some time."

"And that's why you phoned to me that afternoon—that's why you said you didn't want to marry?"

She flung her head up with a long, gay ripple of laughter. "Yes, sir! You see, I'd put the fear of God in you, or what is much worse for a gay young blade, the fear of matrimony."

"No—you didn't. Only the wish for it—"

"It's the fear that creeps on the back of the wish and makes the wish so slow— So you were skeered of me! And I wanted to tell you how I plan to make my own way first—so that you or whoever he may be will never be hampered making yours."

"Jerry—if I had enough right now—oh, if I had! Jerry, dear, do you know how much I mean this? I'm thinking of you all day . . . each night. And when you put your hand in mine—all curled up and soft this way—I could throw everything over!"

She reached up and framed his face in trembling hands: "Oh, I love that. I'll remember that! But, Saxon, I've got to earn my living somehow. I couldn't do it washing your dishes and cooking your tripe. I'd get so damn moody and drab. And you'd go out searching the lavendar ladies who have time to manicure their nails. So I've got to find more enchanting pursuits.

"You know, Saxon, I was brought up in a house that never knew anything but disorder," she went on. "It would be awfully tough to settle down to law and circumstance. To three meals a day and stockings darned and carpets swept."

"So much more fun, don't you think, for you to have your life and I to have mine? And we could each enrich the other instead of stealing from him as is the way of most married folks. Why shoudn't it be as Romaine Rolland says, a two-fold blooming instead of a mutual enchainment?

"Besides, you haven't asked me!"

"And I won't, of course. That is, not today or tomorrow. But, Jerry, in these last five nights when we've tramped around and read and talked—well, hasn't it been pretty gay? Haven't you—" he broke off pressed her little hands against his face—kissed them fervently. He wanted her. He loved her.

For five nights he had been thinking this. Throuh hot, restless hours. Her face with the dewy, flower-blue eyes haunted him. Hold it. Kiss it.

"I'm a fool if I pass this up," he thought in one mood. "I love her. What else counts? I may never care like this again."

And in another moment: "Give up my work? It would amount to that! The work's first—before everything. It's got to be. I've plugged too hard to give up now when I'm just in sight of the goal."

Finally he would remember his paltry income. The impossibility of assuming any further obligations had a chastening and depressing effect.

But tonight in the moonlight by the water and Jerry talking with that airy joyousness, reaching her hand gaily to his neck—tonight he thought swiftly:

"We have the same tastes. She could go on with her work—I with mine. In the evening I could study, she could read. Why does it never work out this way? Marriage shouldn't be such a failure. We might be the ones to make a go of it!"

And he pictured the two of them—he and Jerry, finding some great studio room, living there, joyously working out their bright, thrilling destinies. They could!

Jerry, finding his eyes, full of this eager tenderness searching hers, thought with yearn and tumult: "Oh, if we could! Isn't he god-like? Oh, strong and beautiful!"

And she fancied him gazing with these dream-sweet eyes across flowers and candle-light—gazing immortally into hers. This would be their marriage!

"Wouldn't it be lovely, Saxon, if we could work it out like that?"

"A two-fold blooming? Why not, Jerry? Why couldn't we?"

She laughed gaily: "Then I shall get ready to bud! And some day—some sweet, heavenly day—why!"

She looked up at him, teasing: "But in the meantime, and meaning no mean time, I love you!"

He stooped down quickly and wrapped her in his arms: "I want you!"

She clung to him, her heart thundering. With a faint laugh, her lips moving on his: "You have me. Always!"

CHAPTER X.

A GIRL and a boy talking very earnestly kept walking and walking. Sometimes where the hills were very steep, they took hands and ran.

Now they were at the water's edge, there at the foot of Hyde street. Boats going out; boats coming in. And the crimson flush of the autumn sunset illumining the hills.

"It makes me think of Byron's thrilling line: 'The mountains look on Marathon and Marathon looks on the sea.' Bud—don't you wish you wrote that?"

"I wish lots of things a heck of a sight more!"

The boy, who was exceedingly young with his hair polished and sleek to his head as a coat of varnish turned explosively: "You play fast and loose, Jerry. You'll get caught one of these days."

"Not wishing me any harm, I trust? Don't be snooty, Bud, darling."

She smiled dreamily and watched a big ship just nosing out through the gate. Uplifting sight, stirring the blood with fine, high dreams. "Where is it going?" thought the girl avidly. "To the South Seas? To China?" She wished she were on it—sailing off for gallant, mad adventures. Drink deep and freely, oh, of this sparkling, happy life!

The boy holding her hand, squeezed it roughly: "You've not given me one date since you met him."

"I need that hand, please. As you know, I found you awfully nice—but too expensive."

"Jerry—all right about that. I didn't play square. I'm on the wagon for good—really. Listen—you don't know what you're doing. He's the first fellow that ever stirred you, isn't he? And you're just gone wild on it."

"How wild?" She grinned in his eyes, waiting while he lighted her cigaret.

"Wild enough to be waiting for him to marry you!"

"I'd adore that. Think, Bud, what an inspiring mother and child scene I'd make."

The boy brushed on impatiently: "And you've always wanted to travel . . . to go vagabonding about the world. Remember last New Year's Eve? You said you'd marry me if I'd agree to start on a globe-trotting expedition with you; if I'd be game to try every dangerous thing that came along . . . gamble at Monte Carlo; pray in St. Mark's. That's what you said.

"And Jerry—that's the exciting, thrilling kind of life you want! You're flinging it all away—all of it!"

"Yes," she thought dreamily, and kept gazing at the now vanishing ship: "I'm going out like that to him. I can't stop myself. Nothing else counts—nothing even exists—"

She took Bud's hand and swung it merrily: "Be good and keep that promise, Bud, won't you?"

"If you'll go out with me . . ."

"To help you keep it? Sure!"

At the top of the Lombard hill she bade Bud goodby, calling after him a bright plea: "Oh, remember!"

She leaned on the stone wall, looking into that lovely garden. Across the street in front of her mother's would be having cocktails now. Wait until they were gone. She felt lonely tonight. She didn't know why.

Flinging things away! She knew that she was.

She hadn't meant to care like this. Not for years and years. After she'd done all the brilliant, dangerous things. Then, when the hot-tide was at an ebb; when she was well along, approaching 30, poised and sure of herself like Marza, then she would probably marry. But this was the last thing a person with rainbow longings would count on.

But now she stood gazing into this garden and seeing herself and Saxon entering a wilderness where no one had ever lived before . . . dwelling there. And she, sitting under a giant tree, a child playing at her feet—her child and Saxon's. She flushed and closed her eyes. This scene was more haunting than all other scenes. Her heart filled and filled.

He was sitting in his office, the now completed sketches for his Italian farmhouse laid before him. There was one lovely sketch in color. He kept looking to the door and wondering if Jerry would come. He wanted to show her this.

The door opened. He was about to spring to it, face lighted with pleasure. He saw Paul and turned with a soft, muttered: "Oh, damn!"

Paul was at his side, reaching not quite to his shoulder. "Pleased with them?"

"Yes," said Saxon, studying his uncle nervously, "but are you?"

"You won't see anything finer in all Italy. By the way—how soon do you figure to go over?"

"Two years. I can't manage it a moment sooner."

"Two years. You'll be 27. And by the time you've returned and got started again, well past thirty. Too late! If it's to do you any good, you've got to go now! Before you get side-tracked. I've been thinking this. Better start by the end of the month. Get there and started at work before the first of the year."

Casually, like that! Plucked up bodily. No ifs or ands!

Late that evening he came to Jerry. He told her—blurted it out because he was stunned and not quite realizing it himself.

She looked at him with very large, startled eyes—eyes that glowed, yet had little sparks of fear. "Really?" said she, vaguely. "Really going—oh, that's wonderful!" She came running and buried her face against him. For a moment he thought she was crying.

But she looked up laughing—impish: "You're taking me! I'll stow away. You bet I will!" Then, solemnly, "When, Saxon?"

"In two weeks."

"We only have two weeks more—only that long?"

She kept nodding and smiling. Suddenly she pressed her face against his coat sleeve, curling her hand in his. After a long moment she reached her hands to his neck, kissed his lips.

Flame-sweet purple eyes they seemed as they turned so eagerly—with such pathetic bravery to his. "I love you, Saxon. . . . oh, very much. But do you want to go away thinking of me—waiting for me?"

"I don't want to go away at all, Jerry. . . . Oh, if I could take you with me. I wonder why that should be wrong . . ."

She listened. She felt breathless and weak. Clinging to him she laughed in a rapt, reckless way: "Wrong? What is wrong? That you love me—want me?"

He pressed his face against her shoulder: "Dear, wild woodland thing—you're not real! You're too sweet."

He held her in front of him and looked down longingly. He thought: "Isn't she young? She didn't seem so young before. I shouldn't leave her. I'm going to regret this."

"Answer me, Saxon—oh, please . . . and say only the veriest truth. Will you go away thinking of me? Loving me? Wanting to come back to me?"

"Wanting you—loving you And coming back to YOU—Jerry, yes—to YOU!"

"Then!" said she, standing on her toes and raising her face eagerly: "I'm glad, Saxon It's a fine, gorgeous thing for you. It's glorious!" Then oddly, flinging her head back with a faint, quivering laugh: "Years can't make a difference—to ME!"

CHAPTER XI.

HIS last day. Saxon stood in his room, the drawers of his chiffonier opened. He was both excited and depressed; half of the time regretting, half the time wild with impatience to be gone.

He lifted out shirts, collars, socks. Under these and usually hidden were stacks of letters. From girls. He knew, without opening them, certain phrases that had delighted him and that now brought a gleam—a young, boastful sparkle to his face. Half reluctantly he began tearing the envelopes.

There came rattling from under the papers a silver horseshoe, large and tarnished. He turned it slowly. Martin Rhodes, his father, had made this on his wedding day—had gone to the foundry and cast this silver horseshoe for Mary, his bride, and for luck. The next day he handed Mary all his worldly wealth—seven dollars and fifty cents. To the day of her death Mary could weep and laugh telling of this.

In Martin's day such things were done. A man, when he was young and in love, didn't stop to count the pennies in his pocket nor to read the cynicisms in his philosophy. He married his girl. And took a gambler's chance on the turn of it.

Hurriedly, with a twist at the heart, Saxon dropped the horseshoe in his pocket. Jerry's voice was in his ears; the flame-bright eyes turned eagerly, trustingly to his:

"How could it be wrong, Saxon, that you love me—want me—"

He gulped.

In two years all this would be changed—lost perhaps.

The Strangely Assorted Guests Interest Themselves in an Unusual Sunset

KATIE'S voice held such frightened contrition as she promised to treat her husband "better as king" when he should come back from my errand, that I knew I had averted, at least for the time being, the domestic upheaval in my kitchen which Jim's just anger at his wife's nagging had threatened.

Knowing my little maid's peculiarities, I made no comment upon her half hysterical promise, and contented myself with the remark that I was glad to hear Jim was not ill, as I feared. Adding a direction to summon me from the living room as soon as Jim brought Noel Veritzen to the side veranda, I hurried out of the kitchen door, and skirting the house, came out upon the lawn where the members of the family and our guests were looking at the sunset.

Dicky, with Junior close at his side, had a steadying hand upon his mother's arm and was giving his whole attention to her. His devotion to his mother, his watchful courtesy toward her are unwavering and always give me a little thrill of pride in my husband, even when my heart is filled with resentment toward him.

I knew that Lillian would be watching for me, and I no sooner had rounded the corner of the house than she called to me.

"Oh, Madge! Here's the box seat Phil and I promised you."

She moved to one side as she spoke, with a gesture toward a huge stump near the side of the lawn around which each spring I plant nasturtiums and morning glories. They had not yet come into blossom, but their fresh green foliage covered the stump invitingly. The thought of my filmy gown restrained me from sitting down upon the vine-covered resting place, as Lillian knew it would when she made her jesting remark concerning it.

Philip Veritzen's flamboyant courtesy toward women, however, has mixed with it no salt of humor. As I shook my head at Lillian with a smiling murmur concerning my gown, Mr. Veritzen turned with eager solicitude toward me.

"Please tell me where I can get a cover or a shawl," he said.

Before I could reply Dicky struck in with a laugh that held an unpleasant note, faint but distinct.

"There's always the Sir Walter Raleigh stunt, you know, Veritzen," he said.

The great producer bowed with a smile, but I had seen his lips tighten before they relaxed.

"My coat, of course, is at Mrs. Graham's service," he began, but I struck into the conversation ruthlessly

"We are missing the best of the sunset by this nonsense," I said. "And I do not wish to sit down, would not if this stump were an upholstered armchair. Look at the coloring of those clouds!"

The eyes of every member of the group followed mine and for several minutes there was upon us the silence with which true beauty lovers pay tribute to something unusual in the pageant of nature. We waited until only the last rim of the big glowing sphere was visible, then Mary Harrison spoke impetuously:

"Don't wait till it's all gone," she said. "Let's go up on the veranda before it vanishes altogether!"

There was something in her voice which betrayed an absurd little superstition of hers, and the alacrity with which we obeyed her showed that we all shared her feeling. As we settled ourselves upon the veranda I managed to secure a seat near the door leading into the hall, so that when a few minutes later Katie came to summon me I was able to slip into the house before she could announce the arrival of Noel Veritzen, which I knew was her reason for summoning me.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Amateur Theatricals by Stage and Play Society Affords Pleasant Break in Lenten Quiet

AMATEUR theatricals are one thing—and the work of a group of people who are really interested in the drama, and who seek to do good plays well, is another thing. And I am sure that the constantly growing audiences who go to see the Stage and Play Society's productions will agree with me that each is just a little better than its predecessor. The members really work hard to make their performances clean-cut and as polished as it is possible for non-professional work to be.

At their last performance, early in February, the members gave three short plays, but this time, as you may remember, they are to present just one, A. A. Milne's "The Romantic Age." The "this time" is March 21, and the play will be given, as is customary, in the Carnegie Music Hall.

Quite an excellent cast of "regulars" has been assembled for the play, and it is confidently expected that this most pleasant break in Lenten quiet will be well attended. Those who will take part are Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby, Mrs. Percy G. Kammerer, Esther Ely, Carroll Fitzhugh, who is president of the society; Harold Geoghegan, Rodman McClintock, Frederick Ely and James W. Macfarlane.

There is lots of entertaining down in Palm Beach just now, but it must be remembered that there is a group of society folks out in California who are certainly having far from a dull winter. Pasadena has proved particularly attractive to Pittsburghers this winter, although there has been a group of local people who have gone there every season for many years. Among the latter are the Daniel M. Clemsons, of "Highmont," Fifth avenue, who go regularly to the Hotel Huntington for the entire winter. They give quite a few interesting parties, too, and I have just heard of a delightful musicale which they held last week at the hotel.

It is hardly necessary to say that Mrs. Clemson was Christine Miller before she was married, and at her musicale she lent her beautiful contralto voice to a program of songs that gave her guests an evening worth remembering. There were, I understand, about 350 guests there, and the rooms were decorated mostly with the Japanese flowering peach in deep crimson, which would make a most effective background for the dark-haired Mrs. Clemson.

The Clemsons also gave a large dinner on St. Valentine's Day, having for their guests of honor the William G. Clydes, of Beechwood boulevard, who are spending some time in Del Monte.

The Clydes, I hear, have been attending the polo matches in Del Monte with Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Davis, of Altadena, Cal.

Miss Sara Campbell Gilchrist, of the North Side, and William J. Porter, of Homestead Park, were married February 25 in the study of the Eighth United Presbyterian Church, North Side, by the pastor, the Rev. Dr. W. I. Wishart. Miss Hazel Mae Strang and Burton B. Gilchrist, brother of the bride, were the only attendants. A breakfast in the home of the bride followed. Mr. and Mrs. Porter will be at home in Homestead after March 15.

Miss Hilda Gundelfinger, of Woodland road, Sewickley, and Max Henrici, of Centennial avenue, Sewickley, were married at noon yesterday in the Smithfield German Evangelical Protestant Church by the Rev. Carl A. Voss, the pastor. They left last night for Washington and on their return they will make their home at "Hildesheim," near Clinton, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey A. Keys, who have been at Miami and Havana for the past month, are expected home in Pittsburgh this week.

The Italian Women's Division will hold a dance April 11 in the Hotel Schenley, the proceeds to be used in furnishing an Italian room in the Cathedral of Learning. A meeting will be held tomorrow night in the Italian Club to arrange for the dance. Mrs. R. Molinari is general chairman of the division.

Mrs. Emma Wayman, president of Grandview Review, No. 232, Woman's Benefit Association, will hold a card party in her home in Cowan street, Mt. Washington, tonight. The committee in charge includes Mrs. Emma Glauert, Mrs. Mary Scholl and Mrs. Weyman.

SHOW CAST WILL BE GUESTS AT CLUB TEA

The entire cast of the revival of Sardou's "Diplomacy," which is appearing here this week, will be guests of the Woman's City Club and the Woman's Press Club at a tea to be given Thursday from 5 to 6 o'clock in the City Club, William Penn Hotel. The Press Club will serve as hostess committee, and presiding at the tea tables will be Mrs. E. V. Babcock, Mrs. Taylor Allderdice, Mrs. Jane Burtnett and Mrs. John A. Shoemaker.

The department of public welfare of the Congress of Women's Clubs will hold a program luncheon next Monday, with the Chairman, Mrs. Walter P. Cooley, in charge. Wilbur Maxwell, of Harrisburg, will give a talk on "Shall Pittsburgh have a Community Chest?" And Mrs. Joseph B. Drake, chairman of better movies, will discuss the "Influence of Movies on the Home." A musical program also has been arranged.

Complaints against women drivers are sure to cease, for hundreds of them are going to attend the school for women drivers, opened last night under the sponsorship of the Congress of Clubs. The meeting had to be held in the Chamber of Commerce because the Congress clubhouse auditorium was inadequate for the "pupils."

Mrs. D. Edwin Miller, chairman of the Congress department of education, presided at the meeting. Mayor Charles Kline welcomed the women. Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky, president of the Congress, gave an address, as did Frank E. Duggan, president of the safety council, and Mrs. L. C. Morgart, chairman of the American Red Cross Motor Corps. J. Pierpont, president of the Automobile Dealers' Association, was the speaker of the evening.

A one-act play, written by Mrs. Chester F. Johnston, chairman of the Congress drama department, was given under the direction of Miss Janet Waldorf, and a musical program was given by the Congress Choral, directed by Earl Mitchell, and accompanied by Mrs. J. D. Boydston.

Mrs. Edward O. Tabor outlined the history of American music, illustrating with piano and vocal selections, at the meeting of the Woman's Club of Wilkinsburg yesterday afternoon. The contributions of the English, the French, the Negro, the Indian, the German, Italian and Slavic peoples to American music she illustrated by folk songs. She appeared in the costumes of these different folk.

The program also included violin solos by Miss Charlotte Suliot, accompanied by Mrs. Harvey Schwab. A sale of articles made by blind residents of the city was held under the direction of the philanthropic committee, of which Mrs. John S. Hooper is chairman.

The first musical instrument made in the colonies was the work of a Pennsylvania man, Mrs. C. Van Winkle told the Keystone Association for Historical Research at a meeting held yesterday afternoon in the Congress clubhouse. During her discussion of the musical history of Pennsylvania she pointed out that the Philadelphia Orchestra is an outgrowth of choral singing. Foster and Nevin, both Pittsburgh men, are famous in the musical history of the state, she said.

Mrs. J. N. Orton sang Pennsylvania songs, selected from the different periods of its history, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. J. W. Young, Jr. A paper, prepared by Mrs. E. McDougall, was read by Mrs. T. E. Henninger.

Open guest day will be observed by the Women's Club of the Carnegie Institute of Technology at its meeting Wednesday afternoon. Members of the Women's Club of Oakland will be guests. An entertainment will be given in the theater of the College of Fine Arts by students of the department of drama. The hostesses will be Mrs. E. K. Collins, Mrs. Fred Evans, Mrs. Warren A. Emery, Mrs. B. C. Dennison, Mrs. Jonas B. Nathanson and Mrs. Ernest B. Nettleton.

If you have a Pollyanna, pessimistic or judicial mind, you are not a creative genius, according to Dr. Rollo Brown, of Harvard, who addressed the Twentieth Century Club yesterday morning in the clubhouse. There is nothing mysterious, moreover, he believes, about creative genius.

The creative genius must have intelligence, be aware of the possibilities of the world, and have enthusiasm. With these attributes he creates through his imagination works of beauty which have as their basis the facts of life.

In youngsters this creative genius, Dr. Brown thinks, is most often found. It should not be discouraged, but encouraged, he emphasized. For the creative genius is the magic of life; it represents the liberalizing factor; it breaks down outworn conventions. Through the creative mind the evils of environment may be modified, he thinks.

Dr. Brown was introduced to the club by Mrs. Alfred C. Dickey.

Mrs. J. B. Shaw, contralto, gave a group of songs, accompanied by Miss Marjorie Belle Pyfer, and Miss Pyfer and Miss Ruth Simons gave piano numbers yesterday at the meeting of the Pittsburgh Literary and Musical Club in the Business Women's Club, North Side. The study of Italy was continued in the literary program, with Miss Lettea Donaldson reading a paper on "Pompeii and Herculaneum Rediscovered;" Mrs. H. P. McKown, on "Public Utilities;" Mrs. T. E. Meany, on "The World War and Orlando," and Miss Alice Denning, on "Italian Gardens."

Mrs. A. Ross Gray will talk on "Human Engineering," and the Rev. Frank Edwin Smith will discuss "Influencing Human Behavior" at the meeting of the Woman's Alliance of the First Unitarian Church tomorrow. A board meeting is scheduled for the March 14 session, and Mrs. Milton C. Jens will talk on "High Lights in Recent Fiction." Miss Margaret Jenkins, of Philadelphia, will discuss "How to Make Our Children Internationally Minded" and Mrs. Mary C. Burnett will talk on "Developing a Social Conscience" at the meeting March 21. The Laymen's League dinner and entertainment is scheduled for March 28. Miss Jessie Harper is in charge of the March luncheons.

The Rev. Dr. Albert Edward Day, pastor of Christ Methodist Episcopal Church, will speak tomorrow at the meeting of the Wednesday Current Events class, in the Congress Clubhouse.

Woman's Press Club held yesterday in the Woman's City Club.

At the monthly meeting of the Mrs. C. C. Wholey gave a most instructive talk on recent fashions in American writing. She discussed several of the new books and short stories, and their trend toward a more human understanding of life. A business session preceded the talk and tea was served.

The Children's Charity of the Presbyterian Hospital will hold its monthly all-day sewing meeting tomorrow in the East Liberty Presbyterian Church. Mrs. R. W. Kiser will be in charge of the luncheon.

ACCEPTED VERSIONS OF spring
fashions

When we condense the conclusions of all the truly great style authorities of our day, the fundamental trend of all is to a new mode uncompromisingly feminine.

Woman now must express her old time prerogative of being charmingly feminine and to this end we have lent our efforts in assembling the store's stocks of authentic Spring wearing apparel and accessories.

Details step into stellar roles–the world of fashion is aflutter–bows, scarfs, capes, jabots, pleats, tiers and ruffles are the details that achieve the new femininity.

Lace–most flattering of fabrics —returns to smart favor—its use on formal afternoon and evening frocks is specially smart when combined with chiffon and georgette.

With it all—simplicity still rules and—it's the details, as we said above, that add the softening note in Spring fashions.

SMART GIRLS JUST SMILE, AND DO NOT PRAISE OR KNOCK THEIR RIVALS!
FAY KING

By FAY KING

WHEN the boy friend has a word of praise for some other girl, the wisest thing to do is smile your prettiest and say nothing!

Even if he has a criticism to offer, it is also wise to smile and say nothing, for some men have been known to knock a girl they are interested in to throw their friends off.

But in any case it is wise to smile and say nothing!

Many girls make the mistake of agreeing with his opinion too readily and in order to be generous-minded unduly praise the girl he has admired. This often makes him think the girl in question more attractive than he had thought.

It is a mistake to knock another girl to any man, for no matter how true the things are that you may say of her, at heart every man wants to be chivalrous, and he is apt to begin to sympathize with the girl and think that the reason the other girl picks her to pieces is because she is dangerous and they are envious.

A girl is never at her best when she is trying to disguise her real feelings, whether they are disguised by words of praise or words of condemnation.

The girl who pretends to be jealous, when she really is not, can be attractive and flattering in this pose, but she cannot if she really fears her rival.

Say nothing is always the best policy.

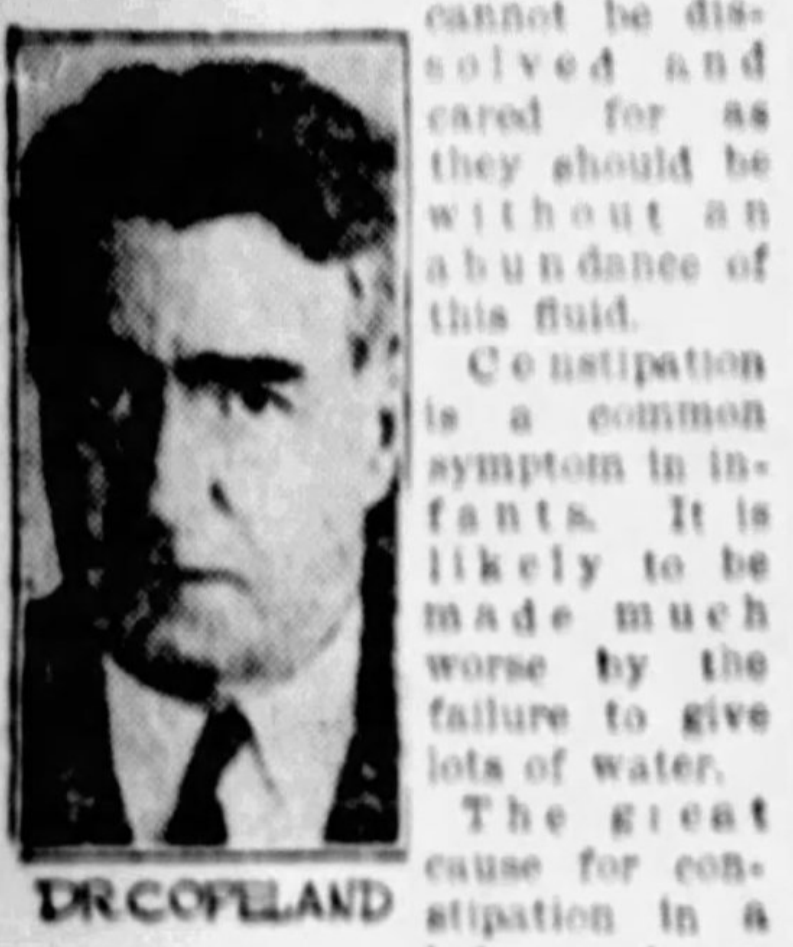
Reduce Baby's Ills by Proper Feeding



DR COPELAND

WHEN a baby develops highly-colored urine, or urine of strong odor, it should create the suspicion that insufficient water is being given. The body wastes cannot be dissolved and cared for as they should be without an abundance of this fluid.

Constipation is a common symptom in infants. It is likely to be made much worse by the failure to give lots of water.

The great cause for constipation in a baby, as in an adult, is improper feeding. The diet may not contain enough sugar. Or there may be too much fat. Or there may be another cause, overfeeding. Any one of these factors play a part in producing constipation.

Wrong feeding is responsible for all manner of digestive symptoms. It is not uncommon for some mothers to give the breast every time the baby is fretful. Such practice is fatal to the infant's welfare because it upsets the digestion. One of the symptoms which may result is constipation.

It is a mistake to permit constipation to continue. If it does, the bowel gradually dilates. It loses elasticity and normal muscular action. In the nature of things, this condition will make the constipation permanent.

It is a curse to anybody, infant or adult, to permit the rectum to become a slave to cathartics and other drugs. The natural means of promoting bowel action are far better. Diet and plenty of water should be all the treatment and prevention needed.

In extreme cases, as I have said recently about the constipation of adults, mineral oil may be given. It is not absorbed; it acts merely to lubricate the bowel. This remedy is better than drugs. But proper feeding is better still.

When there is an actual accumulation in the lower bowels, it may be necessary to give enemas of soap and water. But if the baby is properly fed it will not need to be fussed over until it is a nervous wreck. It is much wiser to avoid the necessity for mechanical treatment.

Every case must be studied on its merits, but there is no doubt that right feeding will do away with the need of drugs in overcoming constipation. Fruit juices, tomato or prune juice, as well as quantities of water, will help a lot.

Sometimes a bottle-fed baby will thrive if the milk supply is changed. The milk from another cow may serve to better the welfare of the child.

But whatever you do, do not begin the practice of giving laxatives or mild cathartics. Never depend on your own knowledge when it comes to giving drugs. This is your doctor's job.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

WHY ARE WOMEN PANICKY?

THE average woman goes through life in a state of PANIC from the cradle to the grave.

When she is a little girl, she has a panic for fear she may not grow up to be a beauty. And when she is a big girl, she lives in a panic for fear she may not be popular. That is what drives her to paint like a fire-alarm, dress like a show-girl, and make a noise like a radio in static.

HELEN ROWLAND

Later, she has a panic for fear she may MISS something—love, a good time, experience, or a thrill. She feels desperately that she much snatch at "life"—and she is lucky if she does not snatch a live wire and get her fingers badly burned.

* * *

By the time she is twenty, she is obsessed with the "marrying panic"—the cold fear that she may not get a husband, while the getting is good. Her mind leaps to the altar before a man has noted the color of her eyes or got her name spelled right; and she often wrecks her chance by jumping at him before he is there to catch her.

* * *

At thirty, she is filled with a panic for fear she may get fat, or lose her husband to another woman, or acquire a double chin.

And at forty, she has reached the "dangerous age" and the panicky feeling that she may grow old and die without knowing romance. So she rushes into foolish flirtations, takes up aesthetic dancing, or gets all tangled up with a kindergarten lover half her age.

* * *

Even between the last dose of medicine and the last breath, she is still in a panic, for fear her shroud won't fit or they will forget to marcel her hair, when she lies in her coffin.

* * *

It is this eternal and incomprehensible fear-complex which drives a woman to do every foolish, desperate and reckless thing she does in life, from dieting herself into consumption to having her face lifted or rushing into marriage with the wrong man.

* * *

From going the pace and making a physical wreck of herself at twenty, to making a spectacle of herself at fifty.

From petting and ginning at sixteen—to banting and rolling at sixty.

From playing at love—to playing with fire!

A MAN never has a panic for fear nobody will admire him, love him, or marry him. He KNOWS he's "good!" And his only astonishment is that any woman should fail to recognize it!

* * *

What a pity woman can't just BE STILL, and take life and love and men as they come—and let them GO, when they go! There are plenty of thrills to spread all the way over life, if a woman would only wait serenely and take them in season. But, alas, woman was born to suffer—and nobody can STOP her!

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Wednesday, March 7

There is no doubt that a skillful person acquainted with the nature of the stars may avert many of their effects.—WHITE.

ALTHOUGH certain new ventures may prosper on this day, according to the message of the stars, yet on the whole, things may work at cross purposes. It is probable that there may be much disruption or moving about, with restlessness and agitation, in business as well as personal affairs. The latter, especially as applied to domestic and affectionate attachments, may assume irregular or disquieting phases. Conservatism and prudence are enjoined.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of opportunity in new directions, with a degree of success, especially through tact and skillful manipulations, but matters generally are under adverse conditions. Be careful and discreet in purely personal affairs lest there be sensational report.

A child born on this day may have talents of an original nature, but may be restless and nervous, with inclination to frequent change. It may succeed best through diplomacy or stratagem.

HARD RAINS PUT STOP TO BUC DRILLS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE, Sun-Telegraph Staff Correspondent.

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 6.—Relief for the farmers and rest for sore baseball arms are the principal results of the moisture that has come to Paso Robles. The battle between the Regulars and Yannigans, which was to feature the activities of the Pirates this afternoon has been called off by Manager Bush. The Pittsburgh pilot has decided that the players are not ready for actual competition in view of the enforced idleness.

Bush stated he would try to run off two practice drills today, but it was doubtful whether he would be able to accomplish as much. He had to forego the two sessions slated for yesterday on account of the heavy downpours.

Donie exhausted every means within his power to stave off an entire day of inactivity, when it was seen that the ball park was out of shape for the afternoon's fun. Bush returned to the hotel and ordered all pitchers and catchers in uniforms for a session behind the hotel.

The first-string performers were in action in something like 15 min-

These three players corraled by Scout Joe Devine of the Pirates were turned down by other baseball men on the ground that they would not make the grade in the major leagues, but Devine insisted they were the goods and they have justified his confidence. Instead of proving to be the lemons they were branded they have developed into valuable peaches in the baseball orchard. Both Miljus and Kremer had been up in the big show before and turned back, while Lloyd was regarded as merely the "kid brother" of a good player, Paul Waner, when Scout Devine recommended them.

EARLY training camp reports say that Adam Comorosky looks like the probable selection for the vacant post in the Pittsburgh outfield, but it will take a great deal more than such reports to convince the admirers of Clyde Barnhart in this district that "Barney" will not be in there when the time arrives for real action and actual pennant competition.

TWO more sectional champions will enter the title ring tonight when Sewickley High School, representing Section II and Monessen, hope of Section V, encounter one another in the third contest of the Western Pennsylvania Interscholastic Athletic Association championship elimination series being played in the Pitt Stadium pavilion.

Last night another divisional contender advanced a notch in the fight when Braddock High School, flying the colors of Section VIII, imaginative though that spangle may be, quite decisively eliminated Har-Brac Union, the result being a score of 33 to 25. Needless to say that both teams, in their best form, kept 1,500 persons in a constant furore.

Outplayed and outscored from the very beginning, Har-Brac made a desperate attempt to rally during the final minutes of play—but to no avail. The best team won without question of doubt, but that best team will have to do some more beating if it ever comes up against Duquesne, victor over Dormont last week, and the only other team thus far to register a win in the tourney.

THE Original Columbus Templars of last season, composed of Cotz and Tracy at forwards, Foley at center, and Sheehan and Ennis at guards, will be the attraction of the Sumer Somerman Club at Columbus Temple Thursday night.

The Templars last season ranked with the leading light first-class teams operating in this vicinity and as all players have been actively engaged this year they should be in fine fettle for the battle with the Somermans.

The Columbus Templars disbanded at the close of the 1927 campaign and their players signed with the J. J. Mieles and the Siano club.

THE Enoch Rauh Club tonight meets an all-star aggregation of former Morry Club stars. It was originally intended to have Moon Klinzing in the lineup against the Rauhs tonight, but owing to the fact that the Big Train is scheduled to appear against a team in Beaver Falls he will not be available for the game at Columbus Temple.

The absence of Klinzing, however, will not detract from the fine array of talent in the all-stars' lineup. Among the well-known local profession favorites to face the Rauhs tonight will be Art McGuirk, Mickey Gross, Artie Hoffman and Norman McVicker.

BOBBY BROWN BOWS TO MAXIE'S STUFF

By HARRY KECK, Sun-Telegraph Sports Editor.

MAXIE ROSENBLOOM of New York fought at Motor Square Garden last night. Of course, he won. His opponent was Bobby Brown of Philadelphia and Havana, a light-complexioned, husky Negro, who is touted as another Harry Greb, and who kept dogging his tracks and fighting back hard and hammering the kidneys until the final bell rang—always trying, but not getting anywhere simply because he was fighting Rosenbloom. He might have made matters tough for almost anybody else, but he happened to be in there with Rosenbloom.

Maxie's eccentric style and great showmanship whipped Bobby to a frazzle, as hard as he tried, and at the finish there wasn't any doubt about the decision. Even the judges knew Maxie had won every [illegible] by a large or small margin [illegible] the crowd—what there was [illegible] went home satisfied. Perhaps that dig at the judges may seem a bit rough, but let it be remembered that last week when this writer asked one of them if the decision had been unanimous the retort courteous was:

utes when a recurring shower interfered with the work. The sharpshooters, however, were protected to some extent by gorgeous trees and with the catchers taking a drenching, the pitchers continued to loosen up. Bush had hardly ushered the yearling pitchers into the workout when a small deluge descended, chasing all hands inside.

MAY PLAY TOMORROW

An attempt will be made to stage a game tomorrow, but the boss of the squad is likely to cancel it again in the event that the players are kept off the ball orchard again today.

Bush and Sam Dreyfuss last evening made arrangements for an additional contest with the San Francisco club, which is in training at Monterey. Under the newest change in plans the Regulars will go to the training camp of the Seals on Friday, March 16, for the purpose of staging an exhibition tilt. In order to get the players to Monterey a sleeper jump will be necessary. The original plan was to convey the entire squad to San Francisco on the evening of March 16.

The first team will make an earlier departure for Monterey and at the conclusion of their game Bush will take his men to San Francisco, which is about three hours away from the Seals camp. There the two squads will meet again and the long series with the Seals, Missions and Oakland will begin on the succeeding day.

Catcher Ralston Hemsley, who was injured in Sunday's practice, limped around yesterday, but when Bush issued the call for pitchers and catchers, the kid responded. Hemsley had a bad night on top of his misfortune, but evidently he is O. K. again.

Presidents' Hopes High

By JESS CARVER.

THE kinkless and untwisted tail of the Golden Panther of Pitt will switch in Washington tonight, in the backyard of the Presidents of Wash-Jeff, where the Golden Cat will make its final tri-state appearance of the season, and seek to claw it's twentieth victim into submission.

This afternoon, Chick Davies and his Dukes of Duquesne are to close the Duquesne season with a game with Muskingum at New Concord, O. The Dukes left early this morning for the Ohio town, and will be back home sometime tonight. The contest will be the twenty-first of the season for the Dukes, who have won 14 out of the 20 games played to date.

Wash-Jeff is entertaining the Panthers tonight with high hopes of victory. Playing here in the stadium two weeks ago, the Red and Black kermen threw somewhat of a scare into the Pitt ranks, and were only trailing by 11 points when the ball game was over. They were behind by 13 at the half, which was not so good.

Pitt came out of the game with West Virginia in good physical condition. The boys are pretty tired, for the campaign has been a tough one, the road rocky and beset with the thorns of desperate opposition. They are all glad that the games of the present week, with Wash-Jeff tonight, and with Penn State Saturday, are to bring the season to a close. They've a right to feel as they do. So would you, and so would your old man.

Andy Kerr and his team may be counted upon to furnish Pitt with a tough old ball game tonight. The team has been playing some good basketball of late, and only last Friday, knocked off Grove City, no feat of which to make sport. Gilchrist, so I understand, has had a slight tummy ache for a few days and for that reason, may not be at his best tonight. If Gilly is off, then the play of the entire team may not be what Andy Kerr is doubtlessly hoping for—though these crippled teams are always the most dangerous.

Tonight's game will feature the last appearance of little Stash Wrobleski and Capt. Sykes Reed against Wash-Jeff, and will furnish local fans a last opportunity of watching Sykes and Stash perform, unless you wish to make the trip to Penn State Saturday. The line-up:

Pitt.		Wash-Jeff.

Hyatt	F	(C) Kirkman

Reed (C)	G	Gilchrist
Wrobleski	G	McMunn

half-time, Braddock proceeded to retain that advantage throughout the remainder of the contest, going so far as to completely shut out Har-Brac scoring in the third quarter. The 19-12 margin between the outfits at half-time was hardly wide enough to call the game "in" for Braddock, although it proved conclusively in the next period its superiority and title-contending rights.

The scoring honors were divided between Kauffmann, with his four field goals and a foul, and Mills, who had four two-pointers and two fouls, for Braddock, and the bulk settled upon the slim shoulders of Factor, with his five double tallies and one foul, for Har-Brac.

Styskoski played an excellent defensive game for Braddock, but left the floor on personal fouls in the third quarter. Crooks' effort on the defensive was best for Har-Brac.

Tonight's battle between Monessen and Sewickley will get under way at 7:45 o'clock. Young Fred Brand, Sewickley's tall center, by the way, is the Western Pennsylvania amateur and junior golf champion; a number of his links friends are planning on seeing him in action on the basketball court.

The lineup:

Braddock—33.		Har-Brac—25.
Caulfield	F	Factor
Mills	F	Hathaway
Brown	C	J. Murdock
Styskoski	G	Crooks
Kauffman	G	Barclay

Substitutions—Coyle for Styskoski, Linton for Caulfield, F. Murdock for J. Murdock, Sparks for Hathaway.

Field goals—Caulfield 2, Mills 4, Brown 3, Kauffman 4, Factor 5, Crooks 3, F. Murdock.

Foul goals—Braddock, 7 out of 13; Har-Brac, 7 out of 19. Individual scoring—Caulfield, 1 out of 1; Mills, 2 out of 4; Brown, 1 out of 2; Kauffman, 2 out of 4; Linton, 1 out of 2; Factor, 1 out of 4; Hathaway, 1 out of 6; Crooks, none out of 1; Barclay, 2 out of 5; Sparks, 3 out of 3. Referee—Snyder. Umpire—Frick. Time of periods—10 minutes.

CARPENTIER HELD EVEN

NEW CASTLE, Pa., March 6.—Louie De Arco, of Cleveland, and U. S. Carpentier, of New Kensington, fought a fast six-round draw at the old Armory here last night. Carpentier excelled at long-range boxing, while De Arco had the better of the infighting. The referee had to pry Carpentier loose several times in the sixth round as he held tight to De Arco, who made a great finish.

WASHINGTON, Pa., March 6.—Joe Eirene defeated Andy Stahura in a slow 10-round main bout here last night, marking a professional boxing revival in this city.

Heeney Defi Is Tabled

NEW YORK, March 6.—(AP.)—Tom Heeney's challenge for a title match with Gene Tunney was tabled today by the New York State Athletic Commission.

Honest Tom's manager, Charley Harvey, visited the boxing board with a challenge and certified check for $2,500, but was told that it could not be accepted, since Jack Sharkey, the Boston heavyweight, is already at the top of the challenging list. Heeney's manager argued he was entitled to an even break, inasmuch as Tom had held Jack to a draw.

Official score sheets of the Heeney-Delaney battle of last Thursday, revealed by the commission, showed the decision was unanimous for Heeney. The judges, Harold Barnes and Charles F. Mathison, each gave Heeney nine rounds, while the referee, Jack Denning, gave the Anzac eight. Delaney was given four rounds by Barnes, three by Mathison and five by Denning, the others being classed as even.

The expected reinstatement of Joe Dundee and consequent clinching of plans for a welterweight title match with Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska wildcat, was deferred by the commission. Although Dundee and his manager, Max Waxman, have been cleared by California courts in connection with the fiasco of a match with Hudkins at Los Angeles last November, the boxing solons explained they were awaiting a final ruling from the California State Athletic Commission. This is expected in a few days. It probably will lead to reinstatement of Dundee, but Waxman will remain barred if the veteran New York commissioner, William Muldoon, has his way. Muldoon today expressed opposition to reinstating Waxman, regardless of what action is taken in California.

ners are agreed that it will break with some violence when it hits Duquesne Garden at 8:30 tonight.

This second storm is to be put on by Les Canadiens, the whirlwinds of the ice. In addition to being the fastest and most expert skaters in the National Hockey League, the Flying Frenchmen are the leading scorers of the circuit by a margin of some 25 goals, and the records show their defense combination to be the strongest in the loop. A list of the league's leading individual scorers includes the names of just about every Canadian starter except the goalies, and these same gentlemen have held first place in the circuit race ever since the season opened.

And despite their achievements, the Canadiens are in no mood for trifling. Recent spurts have brought both Ottawa and Montreal up to within striking distance of the top, and it is certain that this threat from their neighbors will relieve the Canadiens of any mercy they otherwise might show.

In the matter of determination the Pirates probably can match the visitors, for they realize that if they are to get back into a money position they must win practically every one of their remaining seven games. Detroit, one full game ahead of the locals in the race for a play-off berth, is almost certain to defeat the crippled Toronto Leafs tonight, and should the Cougars win and the Pirates lose, the Bucs hardly can appear other than eliminated from the post-season series. In the matter of condition, too, the Pirates are at the peak, but it takes more than condition to conquer such hockey wizards as Morenz, Joliat, Gagne, Leduc, Mantha, Lepine, Gardiner and Hart.

Yes heaven help the Pirates on a night like this!

TEX LANDS MANDELL

NEW YORK, March 6.—(INS.)—Sammy Mandell will defend his lightweight title against Jimmy McLarnin, California contender, in a 15-round outdoor bout here May 17 under the management of Tex Rickard, according to indications today. Eddie Kane, Mandell's manager, has practically accepted Rickard's offer and will leave for Chicago this afternoon in a final effort to convince Jim Mullen that the bout cannot be held in the Windy City under Mullen's promotion.

Richards in the third and deciding battle for the Pioneer Lyceum League laurels.

THE scene of the A. A. U. championship battle between North Side Community House and Pittsburgh Lancers, originally scheduled for the Carnegie Tech gymnasium, has been shifted to Duquesne University. The junior first-class championship likewise will be decided on the Bluff floor.

The Duquesne University floor, the tournament officials believe, affords better seating accommodations than the Tartan gymnasium.

The contest next Saturday brings together two of the best amateur quintets developed in this section and followers of the contestants are looking for a close battle from start to finish.

Community meets Penn Five on the Community floor Thursday night. This is one of the teams the North Siders defeated to remain in the running for the Allegheny Mountain Association championship. In the preliminary game Thursday night Community House Reserves will meet Heinz House Reserves.

DRIBBLES

Next Tuesday night Hyman Gerhauney will bring his much-improved Braddock American Legion team to Columbus Temple to meet the Rauhs. The Braddock team will present several new players against the Rauhs.

The annual Monongahela City basketball tournament, arranged for amateur teams in the junior and senior ranks, is expected to attract the best quintets in Western Pennsylvania. L. C. Healy is receiving entries for the tournament, scheduled for March 24. Teams interested write him at Monongahela, Pa.

ROSENBLOOM VICTOR OVER BROWN

ROSENBLOOM TOO CRAFTY

Brown, who scaled 170½ pounds against 165½ for Rosenbloom, really is a solid thumper, especially when he comes to grips and hammers away to the side of the body and the kidneys with his right, but Rosey, as usual, was too handy a guy for him with his slapping and pecking and cuffing and occasional spirited sorties. At times the leather flew so rapidly around Brown's ears that the "phenom" must have felt certain he was fighting not only Maxie but all of the latter's wife's relations, if Maxie has a wife. Brown was far from disgraced in defeat; he was fighting back hard right up to the final bell, and even forcing the milling in the dying moments, but he was well shellacked, and that's what counts in the end. All of his weaving and bobbing and rushing and dogging of Rosenbloom and occasional shifting into a southpaw stance didn't avail against the speedy maneuvering of Maxie, who fights like—well, like Maxie Rosenbloom. You'll know how that is if you've ever seen Maxie paste 'em about in as workmanlike a fashion as any boxer ever invented. It's always just another fight with axie as he struts his stuff from bell to bell with the assistance of a couple of pieces of sticking plaster frescoed over his eyebrows.

The semi-final, between Tug Phillips of Homewood and Jess Hoak of McKeesport, developed one of those one-punch kayos that are the delight of the fans, even if they don't see the finishing blow and continue to argue for weeks about whether it was a left to the body or a right uppercut to the jaw. In this case it wasn't either. Hoak going out after 50 seconds of the seventh round under the impact of a right to the body that stretched him out full length on the canvas, with his arms extended over his head as he rolled and squirmed in pain. Up to the untimely finish, which came with startling suddenness, it was Hoak's fight. He had won three of the first six rounds, with the first round even, and was going at his best in the fifth and sixth sessions, hammering Tug about with his long-arm swings.

HOAK KNOCKED OUT

The turning point came just before the bell in the sixth round, when Tug got in close and banged a solid right to the midsection. Hoak gasped and dropped his arms and Tug knew he had been hurt. When the bell sent them together for the seventh round, Tug again drove in close and played for the same spot. He sent several punches home in a half-clinch and then maneuvered under Jess' swings once more and shot another right to the weak spot, and down went Jess. It was a clean-cut body knockout, with no one raising a question of a foul. Hoak weighed 139 pounds and Phillips 141. After the bout, Phillips said the vision in his left eye had gone bad in the second round and he could not see clearly from that optic until the finish. The sight cleared up later, however. Tug himself was down for no count in the fourth round from a right to the jaw.

Denver Leonard of the Hill, 142½ pounds, blew up in the last two rounds of his bout with Jack Unglo of Etna, 147½, a rough puncher, after taming the latter's opening rushes, and lost the decision in six rounds. At that, Leonard showed better ability to assimilate punishment than in previous bouts here, and boxed well in spots.

Dave Brown of Atlantic City, 119 pounds, led Young Nanci of Swissvale, 117½, a merry race all around the ring in the six-round opener, but took a lacing whenever Nanci caught up with him, and was saved by the bell in the fifth round.

Al Grayber made his debut as a referee in the first bout and worked nicely. He was cool and moved about slowly instead of trying to outspeed the boxers, and did not bother them, and his work drew much favorable comment. Red Robinson handled the main bout, and Joe Keally the second and third. Frank (Bull) Brown and Jock Simco were the judges.

BETWEEN ROUNDS

An all-star card of four eight-round bouts is planned for Motor Square next Monday night. Willie Davies may appear in the windup.

Announcer Rodgers did not show up and Noble Davis, the local Joe Humphries of more than a decade ago, was dug up as a last-minute substitute. He has less hair on his head now than he formerly had, wears glasses and his once golden voice is a bit rusty from disuse, but he got by fairly well under the handicap. He also seconded Denver Leonard in the second bout. Next week he will referee and fight the opening bout. If he is still around after that they'll make him a judge.

Looked like old times when the ring was made ready for the first bout. Noble Davis was in there as the announcer, Al Grayber was the third man in the ring, and Frank Klaus, former middleweight champion, was the chief second in Nanci's corner.

Garfield Johnson, who knows what it is to buck up against the Rosenbloom buzz-saw, helped to second Leonard in the second bout, and was in Brown's corner as chief sympathizer in the windup.

Rosenbloom is taking things easy these days. He doesn't fight again until Tuesday night of next week, when he meets Frankie Schoell at Wilkes-Barre, and then, unless his manager books some bouts in between for him, he will not appear in action again until March 30, when he boxes Rene DeVos, the Belgian, in Madison Square Garden, New York. DeVos is rated the leading contender for the middleweight title since he recently defeated George Courtney in an upset of the dope in Philadelphia. Rosenbloom has averaged a fight a week for the last three months.

Phil McGraw and Bobby Burns fight in New York tonight. New York's amateur boxers who show at Motor Square Garden Saturday night will box the night before in Cleveland. Phil Goldstein has been matched to box Ray Mitchell of Philadelphia in Newark, N. J., as the result of his three-cornered knockout victory over Joey Durando of New York at Jersey City last night. Cumberland is after a bout between Joey LaGrey and Nick Sussell for March 27. Bud Taylor and Ignacio Fernandez clash in a 10-rounder at Los Angeles tonight. Abe Katz, manager of Sid Terris, has paid $15,000 for Sammy Baker's contract. New York is quoting Jack Sharkey an 8 to 5 favorite to beat Johnny Risko in their bout next Monday night. Tommy Crowley, local featherweight, boxes Jackie Purvis of Kokomo, Ind., in Indianapolis tonight.

"When I was with the Braves we worked out in rain behind hotels and finished last," said the expressive Arkansan as he wiped the water from his hair.

PENNANT talk already is buzzing in the camp. "If we could win last year with all those tough breaks we ought to cop this summer," was the consensus of opinion in one group.

CHICAGO, March 6.—(AP.)—Frank Taberski of Schenectady, N. Y., the defending champion, opened the National pocket billiard tournament last night with a 125 to 36 victory over Harry Wood of Duluth, Minn. The game ran only nine innings, Taberski having big runs of 55 and 47, while Wood's best cluster was 11.

MEHLHORN FIFTH IN GOLF TOURNEY

NASSAU, Bahamas, March 6—Johnny Farrell led the field with a 66 at the end of the first 18 holes in the $5,000 open golf tournament here, one stroke ahead of Gene Sarazen.

Bobby Cruickshank and Art Demane were tied for third with 67. Bill Mehlhorn, Pittsburgh, placed fifth with 70, while Jock Hutchinson and Abe Espinosa came next with 71. The finals were scheduled for today.

PALM BEACH, March 6—In the first day's play of the Florida State tennis championship for men nearly all the favorites won. James Van Alen of Newport was defeated in an upset by S. Jarvis Adams, Jr., of Forest Hills, L. I., and formerly of Pittsburgh, 4-6, 6-6, 6-6.

CHARTIERS HEIGHTS TO MAKE CHANGE

By VERNON A. SWARTSPAGER.

INDICATIONS today are that Dale Zimmerman, erstwhile professional at the Longue Vue Club, later of the Chautauqua Country Club and only recently announced as signed by the Valley Heights Country Club, will become affiliated with the Chartiers Heights Country Club as professional in the stead of Fred Baroni this season.

While several considerations were made at the annual meeting of the board of directors held in the beautiful Crafton club house last night, and a member who attended the meeting expressed an opinion that the matter would not be settled until early next week, it is thought that Dale will be the accepted applicant.

Much favor seems to be directed toward him, although a report that he already has signed a contract has been vigorously denied. It is thought that the delay in action is possibly due to the numerous applications for the position which flooded the committee in charge of the selection, headed by S. Clyde Scott.

FINNISH STAR KEEPS LEAD

BLOOMINGTON, Cal., March 6—Willie Kolehmainen raced over the second lap of the big blister and bunion derby from Los Angeles to New York to pull into Bloomington shortly after noon yesterday with 21 minutes of time separating him from his nearest rival.

Running like a scared deer despite a wet pavement, and a sharp, cold rain, Kolehmainen covered the 34½ miles from Puente to Bloomington in the remarkable time of 4 hours, 12 minutes and 30 seconds.

The gritty little Finn came so fast that he arrived here before the natives had time to prepare a suitable welcome for him.

Eddie Gardner, a Seattle Negro, flashed into second place with a running time of 4 hours, 43 minutes and 43 seconds.

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

ceeded in crowding Barnhart off the regular picket line.

It has been heard practically every spring since 1922, but each time subsequent developments gave the situation a different complexion.

Sooner or later Pooch was back in there on account of the value of his batting punch.

IT is for that reason that followers of the Hagerstown swatsmith are far from giving up hope that he will again be found in the lineup.

Even if he is not on the regular team when the practice games begin in Paso Robles soon they will not concede that he is going to be a mere substitute all season. He has been on the Yanigan team in previous springs, but eventually he was made part of the regular lineup.

THAT Comorosky holds an appeal is not to be denied. He can field and throw, carries much more speed than Barnhart, and if he can hit he will land the job without doubt.

But that's where the question comes in. It remains to be seen whether Adam can surpass the average of .329 he made in his 18 games as a Pirate last year and attain a figure up to major league requirements.

THERE is no such doubt about Barnhart. They may call him "T-bone," criticise his running and say that he lacks spirit and smartness, but the music of his bat has given Pirate rooters many a thrill.

Joe McCarthy.

Base hits cover a multitude of fielding sins and Barney can make them against any pitcher in the league when he is swinging along in form.

Last year was called an off one for him, yet he was there with a mark of .319 for the season and was fifth among the Pirates at knocking in runs, though he played in only 108 games, in many of them merely as a pinch hitter.

MEMBERS of the New York National League club are still panning Joe McCarthy and the other Cub bosses for making the Cuyler-Adams-Scott trade with Pittsburgh.

From the Giant camp comes word that McGraw's players take the passing of Hornsby, Grimes and Taylor with good grace, but that "they, like the Cardinals, cannot understand why the Bruins let Sparkey Adams go to Pittsburgh in exchange for Cuyler."

The same report quotes one of the Giant veterans as follows:

"That was the sappiest deal ever made. Here we had everybody picking the Pirates to repeat even with their 1927 lineup, and the Cubs let a man go to fill the one weak spot the Buccaneers had. And what did they get for him? An outfielder they didn't need. That deal made the going tougher for the Cubs this year, but it also made it tougher for the other teams in the league."

THE matter of equalization of the number of innings in billiard matches, which bobs up from time to time, again is the topic of discussion among billiard leaders in the East.

Eric Hagenlacher.

The principal proponent of altering the rules to allow each player the same number of innings is Willie Hoppe, who has favored the change for several years.

Hoppe this time cites baseball as an example in explaining the unfairness of letting one cueist play an inning more than his opponent. He contends that a certain number of innings should be specified and that the man with the greater score should win.

AS USUAL, the classic performance of Jake Schaefer in defeating Eric Hagenlacher in a Chicago tourney, 400 to 0, with the German not getting one shot, is dragged in. It is admitted that Eric had but a slim chance of equalling that record-breaking performance by Jake that night, but it is contended also that, slim though his chance was, he should have had it.

Other billiard observers insist that the lag for break is as much a part of the game as any other shot and that the advantage it carries is a fair one. And, they remark, the spectacle of a 400 to 0 defeat in a championship tournament has occurred but once. These dissenters to changing the system contend that the winning for the break shot is a 50-50 proposition and fair to both players.

GREENSBURG GENERALS SIGN FRANK EASTLEY

GREENSBURG, Pa., March 6—Frank Eastley of Pittsburgh, a veteran who formerly pitched with San Francisco, Portland, Seattle and Salt Lake of the Pacific Coast league, has been signed to bolster the hurling staff of the Greensburg Generals in the Pennsylvania League this summer, it was announced today.

In addition to hurling in the Coast League, Eastley aided the Moose Jaw Club of the Western Canada League in winning a pennant and also was with the Wheeling Club of the Mid-Atlantic League in 1925, leaving that team to enter business. He is a right-hander.

COVENTERS WIN

WAYNESBURG, March 6.—Geneva College handed Waynesburg its eighth successive Conference defeat here last night, winning by a score of 35 to 25.

RE-ELECT WHITE LEADER

HARVEY WHITE, of Carnegie Tech, who led the Tartan basketball team during the past season, has been re-elected captain of the Skibo varsity for next season by the lettermen of the squad. The Tartans failed to win a single game in 13 starts this year.

TRAINING CAMP NOTES

TAMPA, Fla., March 6.—(AP.)—Elated over his pitching prospects, Buck Harris manager of the Washington Senators, has visions of a pennant this year.

While not discounting the strength of the Yankees, he figures he has a fairly good ball club in training at Plant Field here and says no charge of listlessness will be justified if Washington fails to cop first place.

Bucky inaugurated the double shift training schedule yesterday, sending half the squad to practice in the morning and the other half in the afternoon.

TIGERS TO KEEP 10 HURLERS

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 6.—(AP.)—Manager Moriarty, of the Detroit Tigers, who has decided to carry 10 pitchers this year, is confronted with a difficult task in making his selections.

There are 14 hurlers in camp. Seven of them, Whitehill, Gibson, Stoner, Holloway, Carroll, Billings and Smith are holdovers from last year's squad, and with Elam Vangilder, obtained recently from the St. Louis Browns, appear certain of berths.

GEORGE KELLY REPORTS

ORLANDO, Fla., March 6.—(AP.)—George Kelly has reported at the Cincinnati Reds' training camp in top condition and expects to have first call this season at first base. Last season Kelly had a long siege of illness and did not show to good advantage.

Pitcher Carl Mays has been given a contract, which he is expected to sign.

CARD REGULARS BEATEN

AVON PARK, Fla., March 6.—(AP.)—The old batting slump which gripped the St. Louis Cardinals last season showed its head again in a Yannigan game here yesterday when the regulars went down by a 12-to-3 score.

It seemed an easy matter for the recruits to hold down the regular hitchers. Frankie Frisch and Jim Bottomley, the big guns of last season's Cardinal attack, were quelled by the youngsters and the other regulars apparently weren't playing big league ball.

PHILS READY FOR MACKS

WINTER HAVEN, Fla., March 6—(AP.)—The Phillies were pronounced ready today for their opening game with the Athletics tomorrow. In the camp duel yesterday the regulars nosed out the juveniles, 4 to 3, in six innings.

Pittsburgh's outstanding cartoonist has gone to Paso Robles to join "Donie" Bush's crew of Buccaneers.

"Cy" will spend a couple of weeks in camp, and report with his pen and brush, daily developments of interest.

He will not devote himself primarily to the form displayed on the field by regulars or recruits---Balinger, Post-Gazette baseball editor, will continue to take care of that. Will South Have No Labor Troubles? Georgia Gains

By B. C. FORBES

IN THE SOUTHEAST, March 6. THE Southeast is now advancing more vigorously than at any time since the Civil War.

Its railway facilities have been greatly bettered. Crop diversification is at last making encouraging headway. Industrial activities are expanding most notably. The tourist crop multiplies annually. Accommodations and attractions for visitors are being rapidly improved.

Also, there has been energetic developments of port facilities.

ONLY the other day the Southeast's newest and most modernly equipped harbor was formally opened at Hollywood, Fla. Congress now has before it an appropriation of $1,305,000, indorsed by the Board of Army Engineers and by the House Rivers and Harbors Committee, for deepening and improving the river route between Savannah and Augusta. From this improvement Augusta expects much.

This ancient southern city was moving along rather quietly for years, until some two years ago an aggressive young element decided to make things move somewhat faster. And, thanks partly and if not mainly to printer's ink, they have conspicuously succeeded.

Although their national advertising appropriation was quite modest, the effect upon the citizens themselves was most pronounced, while in response to the effective presentation of the facts concerning what Augusta can offer, there have come within the last year or so 174 agricultural inquiries from 39 states and Canada, 85 industrial inquiries and a larger number of inquiries from people seeking winter homes. Augusta proclaims that its climate surpasses that of the Riviera, and, with its environs, it is rapidly becoming a winter resort rivaling Palm Beach.

THE first textile mill in the South was built here in 1830 and is still operating. Augusta is America's second largest inland cotton market. The largest cotton waste and the largest silk throwing mill in the South are located here. Other industries have been attracted and are now being attracted by the nearby abundance of lumber, ceramic resources, granite, fullers earth and, of course, cotton.

Augusta has had no strikes of any kind in 15 years! White labor is 98 per cent native born and Anglo-Saxon. Negro labor is plentiful, and living costs are such that industrial wages are relatively low. Incidentally, new industries are tax exempt for five years, and Georgia has no state income tax.

The government set up its first flying field here during the war and may select this site for its proposed base in the Southeast. The equable climate makes flying possible all the year round here.

THE largest bank in the South, Citizens and Southern National, was born in Savannah, where Georgia was born, and it still has its headquarters in Savannah. This institution, headed by Mills B. Lane, is employing its $75,000,000 resources for the upbuilding of Georgia via branches in Atlanta and other cities and, following the example of leading New York and other metropolitan banks, it is about to organize a holding or security trading company to enable it to broaden its operations. The bank's capital has been increased, due, says President Lane, "to the fact that the officers and directors believe that we have a very bright future."

SAVANNAH'S growth during the last two years has exceeded anything ever before enjoyed.

Last month the Department of Commerce reported that the customs district of Georgia, with headquarters at Savannah, showed a 62 per cent increase in November exports over 1926, a record for the country. Imports also showed a gain. The climate does not interfere with shipping in this section of the country during the winter months. The growing strength of the Southeast's financial institutions has greatly facilitated imports and exports through home ports. Savannah's water-borne commerce exceeds $500,000,000 annually. Duties collected on imports by the government at Savannah increased from 1917 to 1927 by 163,303 per cent!

THE industrial growth throughout the South is bringing to the front the question, "Will southern factories by and by suffer from as many labor troubles as northern and eastern factories?"

Some labor trouble will unquestionably arise. But most southern manufacturers have profited by the experiences elsewhere and are conscientiously striving to provide satisfactory working conditions, home conditions, educational and recreational facilities, etc. Better foundations, therefore, are being laid.

$14,243 VERDICT IS FOUND IN NOTE SUIT

A verdict for $14,243 was rendered in Common Pleas Court before Judge Harry H. Rowand against T. J. Conly and in favor of Arthur R. Miller, on account of the failure of Conly to defend his case. Miller had sued to collect two $5,000 notes with interest. Attorney R. A. Applegate asked for the verdict for his client.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

United States Rubber.

An ugly break in United States Rubber common and preferred was interpreted as forecasting unfavorable dividend action on the latter when the directors meet tomorrow. No dividends have been paid on the common since 1921. The regular $8 annual payment on the preferred has been maintained for several years. There is considerable doubt of continuance of payments at this time because of the fact that the company failed to earn the $8 on the senior shares in 1927. However, similar incidents such as the current break in the stocks have taken place on other occasions as doubts arose as to the preferred dividend and there were some traders in the Street today who felt somewhat confident that the board would order the $2 quarterly disbursement tomorrow. United States Rubber has been hurt by the sharp decline in crude rubber prices. It has millions invested in its Far Eastern rubber plantations and was the first of the American rubber companies to enter the cultivating end of the business on a large scale.

Radio Shorts Squeezed.

Bears in Radio Corporation of America had their tails twisted today when the stock was run up to above 100, as against yesterday's low of 93½. This issue has been a popular short sale for several weeks and was reported as harboring the largest short interest of any stock in the market with the exception of General Motors. Earnings of the company have not been such as to attract friends to the issue at 100 and above and the consequence was some heavy selling, which forced the price back about 10 points from the year's high. The 1927 statement made a better showing than was generally expected, but net was still low enough to induce selling. As a result the stock got into a technical position which invited the squeeze the bears were given today. Just what other factors were influential in the rise were not given much heed in trading circles, but there have been quiet rumors lately that the company will present a perfected and practical television machine in the near future.

Art Glass Merger Ratified.

Stockholders of the Arkansas Natural Gas Company today ratified the agreement of consolidation involving their company, the Natural Gas and Fuel Corporation and the Industrial Gas Company, terms of which were announced some time ago.

—I—

Baldwin-Westinghouse.

Arthur Cutten, who as an associate of the Fisher brothers in various market ventures, is mentioned as one of the interests favoring the merging of Baldwin Locomotive-Westinghouse Air Brake and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, and stated to a representative of the Wall Street News "that he considered the idea of such a combination both sound and logical. He said, however, that he was uninformed to the extent to which plans had been made or negotiations carried. The report that still other interests might be involved was minimized by Mr. Cutten, who declared that he knew nothing of it and doubted that the companies named—the Standard Steel Car, the American Steel Foundries and the American Rolling Mills—offered as logical opportunities of profitable and satisfactory inclusion.

—I—

General Refractories.

The General Refractories Company reports for the year 1927 net income of $1,425,588 after depreciation, taxes, etc., equal to $6.35 a share on 224,249 shares, against net of $1,241,764 in 1926.

—I—

New York Air Brake.

New York Air Brake Company net income of $1,550,486 for the year ended December 31, after depreciation, interest and federal taxes, is equal to $3.65 a share on the 300,000 shares, against $1,592,934 or $5.31 a share in 1926. Surplus after dividends was $227,506, against $192,133 in the previous year. The company has notified the stock exchange of a proposed increase in authorized common stock from 300,000 to 500,000 shares.

Oil Production Drops.

Daily average crude oil output in the United States for the week ended March 3 was 2,343,139 barrels, a decrease of 18,174 barrels from the preceding week and 91,167 barrels below the corresponding week of 1927, according to the Oil and Gas Journal. This is the lowest production since the week of January 22, 1927, when 2,307,143 barrels were produced daily. Light oil output fell 17,465 barrels last week.

—I—

February Oil Well Completions.

While oil well completions showed gain during February, production of completed wells fell off, Oil City Derrick figures indicate. There were 1,493 wells completed in February, against 1,352 for January, while production was 219,297 barrels, against 453,314. Dry wells in February were 355, against 421 in January; gas 217, against 202. At close of month 4,926 wells were being drilled, a decrease of 91.

—I—

Holmes Get Traffic Bonds.

The high bid for $125,000 city of Pittsburgh 4¼ per cent electric traffic control signal bonds, dated February 1, 1928, and maturing 1929 to 1938, was 101,736, and the bonds were awarded to J. H. Holmes & Co. of this city. Holmes & Co. are offering the bonds on a 3½ to 3¾ per cent basis.

—I—

Freight Movement.

Market observers are closely watching freight traffic figures for indications of improvement in general business. February earnings for the railroad promise to make a better showing than January net, and there are signs of further improvement in the current month. While aggregate car loadings of all roads have failed to make gains, those of some individual carriers in the West have recovered to last year's level or near it. In the East the state of the coal business keeps totals below last year, when the country was stocking coal in preparation for a strike. But February loadings made somewhat better comparison with 1927 than those of immediately preceding months.

—I—

Statist Like Electric.

Considerable accumulation of an investment character has recently come into General Electric for the account of British interests. How well the stock is thought of in London is illustrated by the following statement of the ultra-conservative Statist: "General Electric caters for an industry which has still great scope of development. Though this may receive some check in the event of a reaction in the general trade of the United States, the current price for the common shares nevertheless be regarded as moderate."

—I—

Columbia Steel.

Columbia Steel Corporation, including Carbon County Railway Company, reports net profit of $1,066,339 for 1927, equal after preferred dividends to 17 cents a share on the common, against $1,030,271 in 1926.

—I—

International Paper.

Total production of paper and pulp by International Paper Company in 1927 was 833,633 tons, highest on record, against 749,172 tons in 1926. Production of all grades of paper was 702,105 tons, as compared with 607,630 tons turned out in 1926. Pulp manufactured for outside sale was slightly lower, 131,528 tons, against 132,542.

—I—

Omar Oil Plan Effective.

Omar Oil and Gas Company stockholders have been advised that a plan of refinancing the company and its properties has been adopted and declared effective as of March 6, 1928. All persons who have subscribed for stock under the reorganized basis of capitalization are called up to make payment of subscriptions to Keystone National Bank of Pittsburgh, depositary.

—I—

Northern Pacific.

February gross revenue of the Northern Pacific were more than $600,0 above the $5,675,675 in February last year, said Charles Donnelly, president. Although operating conditions were not as favorable as a year ago, he was confident net operating income would exceed the $881,665 for last year. At the final hearing in Washington, March 1 on the proposed merger of the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and the Spokane, Portland and Seattle, Mr. Donnelly said rebuttal evidence would be submitted and general principles under which opposing and connecting short lines could be brought into the merger would be outlined.

—I—

Youngstown Sheet and Tube.

Youngstown dispatches to Wall street say there is nothing to indicate any change this year by Youngstown Sheet and Tube in its $5 dividend rate on the common. The company expects to show average operations of 70 per cent for the first quarter. Earnings are less than for the same period of 1927, but the price situation is improving.

—I—

Unemployment Decreasing.

Unemployment is decreasing throughout the United States and business is improving, according to Secretary of Labor Davis. Mr. Davis shortly will issue a statement to this effect, which he says, will be based on facts.

—I—

Woolworth Sales Increase.

F. W. Woolworth Company February sales totaled $19,601,574, as against $17,271,334 in February of last year. For the two months the company's sales were $36,112,161, as compared with $33,433,334 for the same period in 1927.

Big retail merchandising business this spring is forecast by H. T. Parson, president. "The February gain by the company's stores over a year ago, with increase well distributed over the country made him optimistic on the spring trade outlook than in months. He looked for big Easter shopping business.

—I—

Middle States Oil.

The stockholders' protective committee of Middle States Oil Corporation has issued a letter stating that within a short time measure toward a reorganization will take place. The letter says that claims for income taxes which originally amounted to over $15,000,0 will ultimately be settled for a smaller sum and that the tax situation is no longer an obstacle to reorganization.

—I—

Dictaphone Corporation.

Net profits of the Dictaphone Corporation for 1927 were $612,560.62 after charges against the year's operations, with adequate provision for depreciation and taxes. This was the most profitable year in the company's history. Gross sales for the year 1927, both domestic and foreign showed gains over 1926. Sales so far in 1928 give indication of a substantial increase in this present year even over the new record for 1927.

—I—

Interstate Public Service.

An issue of $12,554,000 Interstate Public Service Company first mortgage and refunding 4½ per cent bonds is being offered today at 94½ and interest, yielding about 4.85 per cent, by Halsey, Stuart & Co., A. B. Leach & Co., E. H. Rollins & Sons and Hill, Joiner & Co. Proceeds of the issue are being used for the retirement of over $12,000,000 in bonds bearing higher coupon rates and for other corporate purposes.

—I—

Municipals in February.

The addition of a $52,000,000 New York City subway bond issue on the last day of the month, brought the February total of state and municipal borrowing up to $128,093,364, and the total for the year to date to $231,543,058. Without that one loan, which is a short-term borrowing operation of a rather unusual character, the volume of borrowing for the current year to date would have been the smallest for any year since 1922. So far, 1928 is following closely the pace set a year ago when $247,356,094 was the total par value of new issues. The following table, compiled by the Daily Bond Buyer of New York, offers a comparison of state and municipal borrowing in February and the two months ending February 28, for years:

	February.	2 Mos. Ending February 28
1928	$128,093,364	$231,543,0

MOTORS TOPS PEAK THIRD TIME

NEW YORK, March 6.—(AP.)—An outbreak of selling in the rubber shares caused only a temporary halt in the upward movement of prices in today's stock market, which was again featured by heavy accumulation of the motor shares. Trading in General Motors common, the feature of the three previous sessions, quieted down somewhat, although the stock mounted to a new high record at 148½ after having dipped to 146 around mid-day.

Hupp Motors, in which William C. Durant is reported to have a large interest, ran up to a new peak at 41⅞, and there was brisk demand for Packard, Nash, Studebaker, Hudson and Chrysler. U. S. Rubber common sank more than 3 points to a new low at 42⅞ and the preferred broke 5 to 88¾ on fears for the safety of the preferred dividend and rumors of large inventory losses through the recent drop in crude rubber prices.

There was little in the day's news to influence the price movement, although Wall Street expressed considerable interest in the proposed formation of a $600,000,000 holding corporation to consolidate several railroad equipment and electric manufacturing companies. Call money renewed at 4½ per cent, but loans in the outside market were reported as low as 4 per cent.

In the afternoon recovery, most of the active stocks reached their best prices of the day. Warren Bros., Greene Cananea Copper, International Harvester, Case Threshing Machine, American Tobacco A and B and American Zinc preferred all sold 4 to nearly 7 points above last night's closing quotations. The success of the drive against the "shorts" in General Motors inspired a similar campaign against bear traders in Radio and International Nickel, which rallied briskly on heavy buying.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, March 6.—Despite unresponsive cables, Chicago wheat prices averaged higher early today, with adverse crop reports continuing to come from the central west. Sangamon, Cass and Morgan counties, Illinois, reported average damage would be 50 per cent. Opening at ⅛c off to ¼c up, wheat sagged a little further and then scored general gains.

Corn and oats also developed strength, corn starting ⅛c lower to ⅜c higher, and subsequently showing an advance.

Provisions were mostly higher.

At noon wheat was showing ⅛c net decline to ⅛c advance, and corn was ⅝@1⅛c up.

Wheat traders gave special attention today to dispatches by a leading unofficial crop expert who telegraphed from Springfield, Ill., that after a drive of 150 miles he estimated that winter killing would result in the heaviest abandonment of wheat acreage ever known in that section. Late planted fields, he said, were especially poor, and damage ranges from 10 per cent in early fields to 80 per cent in late fields.

Prospects of smaller receipts of corn from the interior were largely responsible for upturns today in corn values. Numerous messages from Illinois points suggested that the heavy movement of corn is over. Considerable buying of corn today and selling of wheat was regarded as closing of spreads between the two grains.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, March 6.—(AP.)—Bond prices followed a firm course today, but trading continued in limited amounts. High grade issues attracted only nominal attention and fluctuated in very narrow margins.

The recovery of Seaboard Lines which began yesterday was carried further today. Consolidated 6s sold about a point higher, while fair gains were recorded by several others in the group. Buying of the new St. Paul bonds continued, adjustment 5s reaching a new high.

Prices in the foreign group held steady. Chilean 6s changed hands in moderately large volume at little change from yesterday's final quotation and there was some activity in Belgian bonds. French and Italian issues again displayed easing tendencies.

United States government obligations were slow in getting under way.

NEW YORK, March 6.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

WESTINGHOUSE RUMORED IN MERGER

NEW YORK, March 6.—(AP.)—Consolidation of six companies in the railway equipment and steel industries, with assets of about $600,000,000, is believed in Wall street to be part of the plans which the Fisher Brothers, of Detroit, and Arthur Cutten, of Chicago, are reported to be fostering in the formation of a holding company to incorporate their holdings of Baldwin Locomotive, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing and Westinghouse Air Brake.

Other companies talked about in the financial district as likely to be taken over by the proposed holding company include American Rolling Mills, American Steel Foundries and Standard Steel Car. The Mellon interests of Pittsburgh control Standard Steel Car.

Samuel Vauclain, president of Baldwin Locomotive Works, said he knew nothing about reports of establishment of closer relationship between that company, Westinghouse Electric and Western Air Brake.

"Nothing has come before me on the subject," he asserted, "but, of course, one never knows what may happen tomorrow."

Mr. Vauclain is a director of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing which has had a working agreement with Baldwin for some time in production of electric locomotives, the electrical equipment being furnished by Westinghouse. Directors of Baldwin Locomotive meet March 8 for organization.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Although there was not much activity in the raw sugar market early today, the undertone was firmer and holders were asking advances of 1-16, or 4.46c, but refiners were not inclined to follow the advance. Sales confirmed were a lot of 10,000 bags of Cubas to an operator for clearance March 20, at 2.60c cost and freight from Cuba, equal to about 4.40c duty-paid, and 21,000 bags of Philippines, April shipment at 4.40c.

The raw sugar futures market opened 2 to 5 points higher, March position showing the maximum gain on covering, due to the issuance of 54 notices. Steadiness of the spot market and the firmer London market were also influences, but there was considerable liquidation or realizing on the upturn. Reactions followed, with the market at midday 1 to 2 points net higher.

The refined sugar market was unchanged at 5.70 to 5.75c for fine granulated with business again mostly in the way of withdrawals on old contracts.

STOCK BETTERS EARLY PRICE

The securities committee of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange has formally admitted to trading the new stocks of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company, consisting of 3,234,486 shares of no-par value common stock and 47,861 shares of $100 par preferred stock.

The new common represents a three-for-one split-up of the old $25 par common. The preferred issue is substantially the same as the old preferred and represents the outstanding portion of an authorized issue of $5,000,000.

The new common appeared on the board for the first time this morning at 35, practically unchanged from the level at which it has been selling on the local curb. The old common closed last night at 105. The new is being handled on a "when issued" basis pending actual issuance of certificates.

Supply of Standard common was limited at the 35-level and there was a subsequent advance as bidders lifted the figures at which they were willing to buy. Listing of the shares on the New York Curb this morning was a factor in the advance.

The general list here was quiet but steady. Prices for most of the miscellaneous issues held close to the previous closing levels and such changes as were recorded for the day were in most instances of fractional scope.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, March 6.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 3 points and eased off in early trading under liquidation with some local selling inspired by relatively easy Liverpool cables.

Trading was very quiet on the early decline, which extended to 18.47c for May and 17.96c for October, or about 7 to 11 points below yesterday's closing quotations.

Private cables reported local and continental liquidation in Liverpool owing to the breakdown of the conference on production costs, but said there were fair cloth sales for India and China, although yarns were quieter.

About 50 March notices were reported in circulation during the early trading, which apparently caused some near month liquidation. The decline extended to 18.47c for May while October sold off to 17.96c, or 7 to 12 points net lower. Offerings were light, however, and the market steadied on covering, May selling up to about yesterday's closing quotations, while later deliveries were 2 to 4 points net higher at midday. March was relatively quiet and easy, but rallied 2 or 3 points from the lowest.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. Gertie Weismandtle, who died one year ago.

Not dead to us, she who loved us,
But gone before.
Mother lives with us in memory
And will for evermore.
Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
From which none ever wake to weep.
While she lies in peaceful sleep,
Her memory we shall always keep.

Sadly missed by husband, daughter and sons.

BUGS BAER Says

LINDBERGH should have no difficulty in persuading the states to adopt federal air regulations.

No legislatures will be taxed for appropriations to widen the Milky Way, nor will cities be embarassed by swollen budgets essential to the deepening of the Big Dipper.

Parking spaces will not be further congested and there will be no favorite sons seeking offices in the clouds.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

There are no political jiggers attached to Lindy's requests. There are not even grade crossings to be bridged nor swamps to be paved.

One legislator objects to dining cars on future airplanes, because the chef might have cocoanuts and fish for supper and throw the shells and heads overboard.

Which contingency could be met by a federal reserve codicil limiting the menu to string beans and puffed rice.

We hope that Lindy gets his indorsements before the Miami speculator starts his flight for the moon.

Folks who enjoyed that real estate stampede in Florida some years ago know that shooting at the moon is nothing unusual in Miami.

But this long distance commuter has actually built a rocket for a non-stop flight to the cuckoo factory.

The moon is only 20,000,000 miles outside the five-cent zone. If you get into trouble on the way you cannot ask the conductor for a transfer.

Jules Verne wrote a novel about a trip to the moon. But we never saw the book any higher than the seventh shelf in the public library.

Which may be the altitude record for the juvenile department. It's different when you are about 11,000,000 miles north of a two-family bungalow and discover that you have left your parachute in the garage.

If you are fortunate you will fall through the roof of a mattress factory. When you tumble that far you go through a fireman's life net like nutmeg through a grater.

If he went better than one hundred miles an hour it would take him twenty years to get there. He is a middle-aged man now, and he would be a sucker if he bought a round trip ticket.

He may get there and may not, but we don't want to be inside his rocket when the engineer whistles "all aboard."

War Debt Payment Scheme Tends Toward War Again

There is never any cessation of the propaganda and clamor to cancel the war debts owed to the United States by the Allies.

Instead of collecting in full from the Allies, making no concessions except a delay in interest payments, we made the mistake of canceling part of their debts.

We cut England's debt to us to 75 cents on the dollar, Italy's to 25 cents and we have offered to take 50 cents on the dollar from France. They all hate us heartily for not forgiving them entirely.

Now it is proposed to make Germany hate us, too, by making Germany pay reparations to us instead of to France and England.

Our investors are to buy German reparation bonds and the proceeds are to be turned over to the Allies, thus handing them in American money a large part of the war indemnity they exacted from Germany at the Treaty of Versailles.

The plan is to have us pay the German indemnity now, in a lump sum. Then we, instead of the Allies, are to wait for reimbursement by the taxpayers of Germany, which for dozens of years will go on sweating to pay its war tribute TO AMERICA.

The United States refused to sign the Versailles Treaty because of the iniquity and severity of its terms. We refused to take a cent of indemnity out of a war fought "to make the world free." Now we are to buy the indemnity claims of the Allies. We are to be put in the position of a foreign tyrant taking toll from the daily earnings of the generation of Germans now growing up.

Such will be the result of the scheme now being set up by the international bankers here and abroad.

The reparations commission has in its possession sixteen thousand million marks—four thousand million dollars—of German war indemnity bonds which are a first charge on the earnings of German railways and German industries. Reports from New York are that one thousand million dollars of these bonds are to be sold in the United States the first year; the [illegible] to be sold later.

It is easy to see what the international bankers will get [illegible] of it. On four billion bonds sold they will earn two hundred million dollars in commissions.

It is not so easy to see what there is in it for the United States.

It will mean the investment of a huge amount of American money in the biggest quarrel in Europe today.

It will make us the largest war creditor of Germany. Our Government will be constantly importuned to help keep Germany in subjection in order to make safe the investments of our citizens. We shall have great difficulty in keeping out of the war that will very possibly arise from Germany's revolt against an unbearable tribute.

Does the Government want the money of its citizens used to buy us into the opportunity for all this trouble?

We do not believe so. A word from President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon would make the matter entirely clear.

Grand Words

Words are dangerous things. Misused, they are as great a menace as a revolver in the hands of a maniac. The tyranny of words is the worst of all tyrannies. We are unaware of the subtle spell they cast over us.

Take the word "liberty." It is an old word, a sacred word. But what sins have been committed in its dear name! What empty and impassioned arguments have been put forth at the provocation of that simple three-syllabled sound.

"Liberty" is a clarion call challenging man to assert himself. Blood has been shed for its sake. Dissension has been rife because of it.

But what does "liberty" mean? We do not ask. The word looks profound. It possesses a deeply significant air. It must mean something.

But does it?

Nero fiddled while Rome burned. Was he exercising his "liberty"?

The dissatisfied wife murders her husband. She wants "liberty."

The flapper may smoke cigarets she doesn't like, drink gin which makes her ill. It's her "liberty."

Grand word, this "liberty"!—word with a thousand different shades of meaning.

Use it sparingly. Beware of the grand word.

Genius and Digestion

Does digestion play a part in the formation of our ideas? How, for example, does a clogged alimentary canal affect the historian's view of mankind, the poet's inspiration, the philosopher's opinions, the scholar's powers of absorption?

It was no idle whim or impertinent malice that led a critic to say of Robert Browning's poetry that its exuberance and optimism were owing to an extraordinarily healthy digestion. The poet who delivered himself of "God's in his heaven and all's right with the world" must have been feeling in uncommonly fine fettle. His brain cells may not have been exploding, but his digestive tract must have been as clear as a whistle.

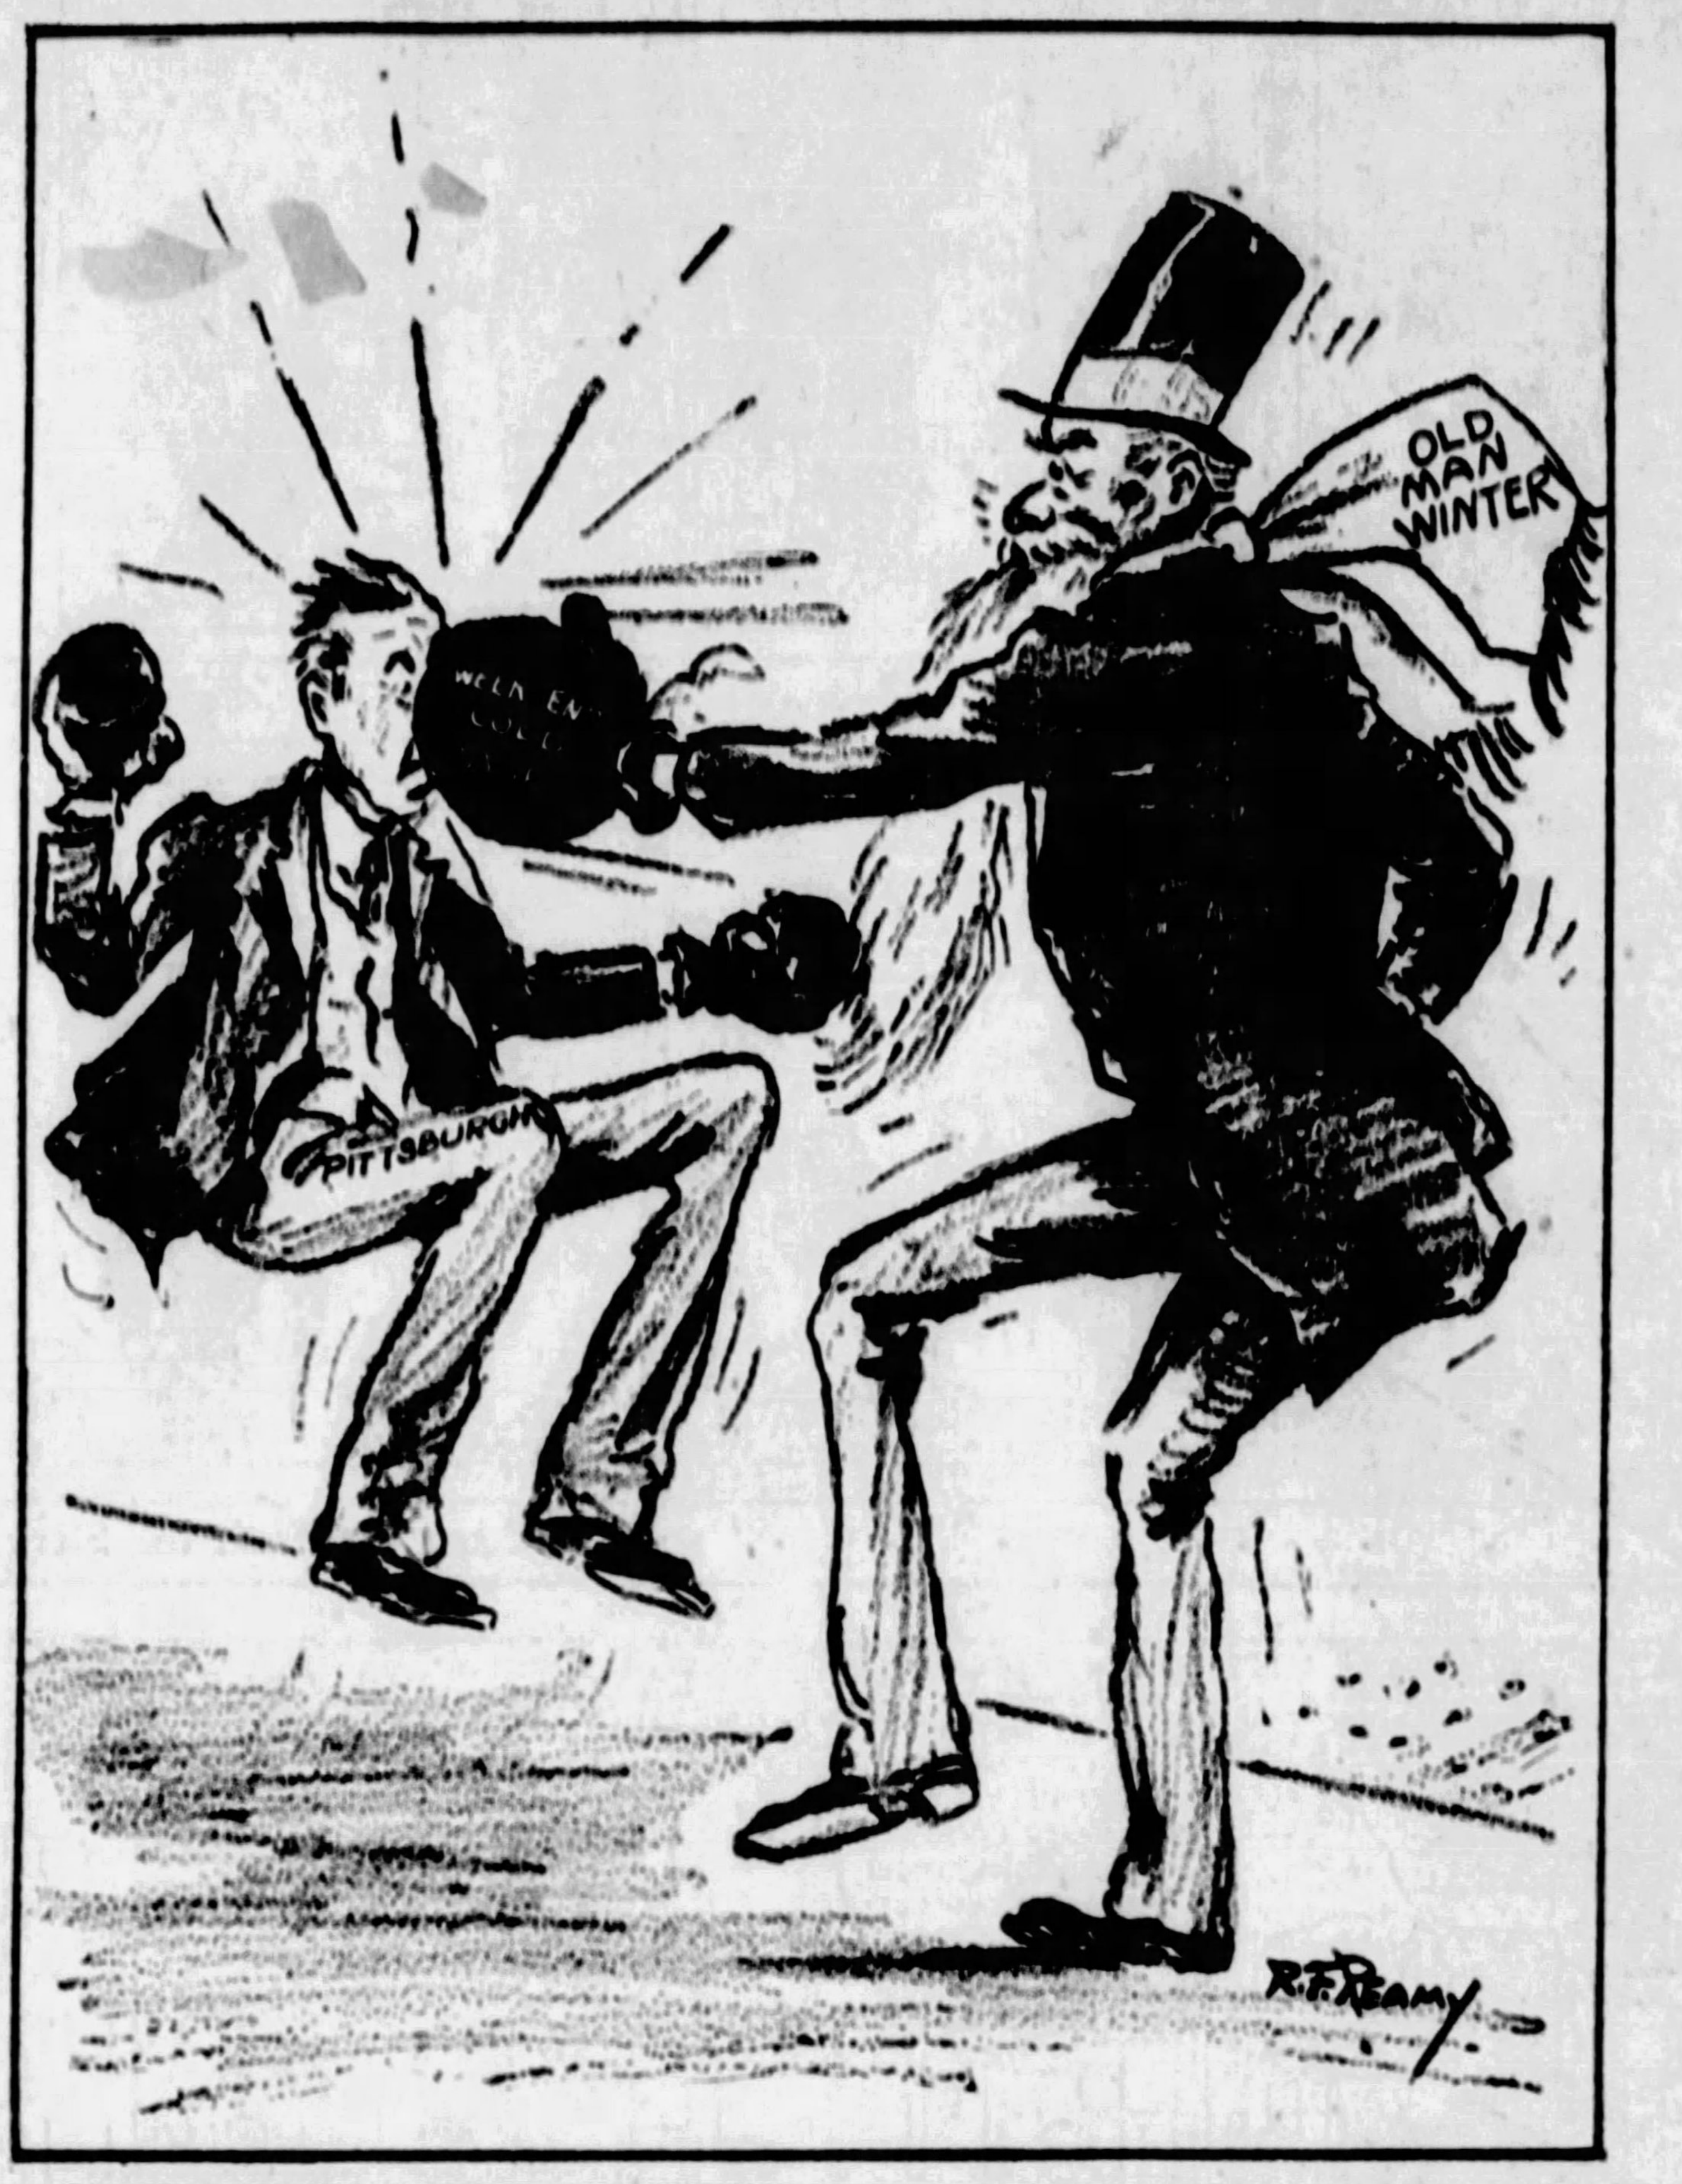
Macaulay in one of his letters wrote of Carlyle, the crabbed and acrid Scotch historian: "Carlyle is undergoing a water cure. I have not seen him yet, but his water doctor said to S. the other day: 'You wonder at his eccentric opinions and style. It is all stomach. I shall set him to rights. He will go away a different person. If he goes away writing common sense in good English I shall declare myself a convert to hydropathy."

We are prepared to admit that Carlyle possessed a wretched digestion. We go further and say that he was never cured. He suffered from a perpetual bellyache which left his mind shrouded in gloom and the blue vapors.

Now comes the report of studies made at a high school which show that 24 per cent of the slow or dull pupils rated excellent in nutrition as compared with 16.5 per cent of the bright boys.

What are we to conclude from this? Does a good digestion make for dullness? Possibly. Especially, if it is too good.

STILL HAS A PUNCH



Garrett P. Serviss Says:

The Joy of Age

SOME surprise has been expressed that so many elderly people are enrolled in the Columbia University Home Study Division. Out of 7,500 men and women enrolled, five are more than seventy-five years of age, sixteen are above seventy, and more than 1,200 are above forty, of whom 408 have reached fifty years.

But this is exactly as it ought to be. The mind is the lasting part of man. It never fails as long as the bodily functions hold out. Keep its tools in good condition and it will continue to work with increasing effectiveness as long as life lasts. Man is the only animal who advances, because he is the only one who possesses what may be called a mind. The gleams of intelligence in the lower creatures are not of the creative order. Those animals are not inventive, i. e., not "finders out," or contrivers of new combinations and new situations. Through geological ages they continue to follow the original rut, growing the same way, acting and living the same way. Man goes ahead. Brilliant as some ancient civilizations were, that of today is far in advance of them.

And in the human race the "elderly" do not cease to advance, though most of the new things may originate with the young. Even so, those who are older wish, generally, to keep in the current of fresher events and ideas. That explains, if any explanation is needed, why men and women past seventy-five years enroll themselves in university extension and home study courses. The appetite of the mind never palls for intellectual things, while its digestive capacity and discriminative power increase with age.

The whole lifetime should be regarded as a post-graduate course by those who count themselves as "educated." Time can always be found for at least a little study, and the habit of home study—whether guided by advice from a university or self-guided—soon makes it a recreation as delightful as any that life affords.

The croakers who talk about man being only fit to pass away from this earthly scene after reaching the age of fifty, are at the same time slanderers of their race and despisers of their own birthright. Intellectually, a man should be nearer his zenith at seventy-five than at forty. If he is not, it is the material part of him that is at fault. It is the machine, but not the spirit behind the machine, that deteriorates. Therefore, one should take care of his bodily vigor not for the sake of prolonging mere sensual enjoyment, but for the sake of reserving a long, serene, brightly glowing evening for the euthanasia of his mental powers.

• • •

"We cannot describe," said Emerson in one of his lectures, "the natural history of the soul, but we know that it is divine. I cannot tell if these wonderful qualities which house today in this mortal frame shall ever reassemble in equal activity in a similar frame, or whether they have before had a natural history like that of this body you see before you; but this one thing I know, that these qualities did not now begin to exist, cannot be sick with my sickness, nor buried in any grave; but that they circulate through the universe. Before the world was they were."

Once Overs
By J. J. MUNDY

Consider Others

IS THERE someone in your department who appears to prefer to lunch alone?

Perhaps he or she carries a lunch and goes off to the far corner to eat it, but it is not because of any dislike of you, or the others.

Perhaps the amount which can be expended for lunch, or the kind of lunch carried may make the person want to eat alone.

Perhaps a fairly good salary should make this person want to eat as much as you do, or at least you think so.

But you don't know the demands on the good salary nor do you know all there is to a physical condition which may require a slender lunch.

There may be a goal sought that requires the strictest economy

It is not kind of you to force your company on a person who shows by his or her attitude that your presence is not wanted at lunch time.

Usually there is a financial reason back of the diffidence.

And when there is, remember that self-denial is best borne alone.

Be considerate.

The Rhyming Optimist
By ALINE MICHAELS

Forest Depths

FURRED and feathered, the wild things go
Here where the moss on the boughs swing low,
Seeking the depths of the forest's gloom,
Safety and rest in its green-arched room,
Stealthy the steps of the furry clan,
Ever alert for the foe called man.
Rustle of leaves through the whole day long,
Strange, low calls, then a burst of song;
Sudden whirring of unseen wings,
Sense of watchful and hidden things.

Tales that are Told

As She Wrote

THE following examples of pidgin-English are from a former British chaplain at Yokohama:

Over a transport agency office: "Leave your luggage with us; we will send it in every direction."

Over a dressmaker's shop: "Clothing of woman tailor ladies furnished in the upper storey."

In a tramcar on a country line near Miyanoshita frequented by English-speaking travelers: "All persons who are lunatics, intoxicated, or infected, are not allowed in here."

It may, perhaps, in this connection be permissible to set off against these two instances of unintentional humor perpetrated in the streets of a well-known country town in Surrey:

On the notice-board of a wayside chapel it was announced that "On Saturday night at 8 p. m. the annual potato-pie supper will be held. The subject of the sermon on Sunday morning will be 'A night of horror.'"

Over a newly-decorated restaurant the alluring notice invited: "To cyclists and photographers. Try our 1s. 6d. luncheon. Dark room provided for developments."—London Tit Bits.

No Need to Hurry

A MAN with very long hair was stopped in the street by a small boy who asked the time, and was told it was ten minutes to eleven.

"Well, at 11 o'clock," said the boy, "get your hair cut."

The urchin immediately bolted, but the man gave chase. He rounded the corner and knocked over a policeman.

"What's wrong?" asked the officer, picking himself up.

"That boy told me to get my hair cut at 11 o'clock."

"Well," said the policeman, looking at his watch, "why are you hurrying? You've got nearly ten minutes to spare."

Spellbound

TEN-YEAR-OLD MARY had won a scholarship, and was telling her mother about the papers.

The subject for essay had been, "How I Spend My Saturday Morning," and after discoursing on minding the baby, helping mother wash up, and so on, Mary ended with the amazing statement, "and then I play a game of chess with my brother."

"Chess!" queried her mother. "But you can't play chess!"

"I know. I wanted to put dominoes, but I couldn't spell it."

Souvenirs

"BROWN seems to be making plenty of money."

"Is that so?"

"I was at his place the other night, and he did me well. Champagne, Corona Coronas, and that sort of thing."

"Lucky beggar!"

"Rather. Why, he goes to America three or four times a year."

"Does he? What line is he in?"

"I can't say; but, judging from the spoons and forks, I should say the Cunard Line."—London Tit-Bits.

LISTEN, WORLD! ELSIE ROBINSON Says: I Don't Know!

SOMEBODY writes—"Why do you so often say 'I don't know?' Journalists should always speak with conviction. If you don't know, your boss had better hire someone who does."

Why do I say, "I don't know?"

BECAUSE I DON'T KNOW. And I have at last accumulated enough wisdom and courage to acknowledge the fact.

It wasn't easy.

I started out, as most young people do, with a feeling that the world was my oyster which I would open speedily with a few smart smacks. I also had a vast and noisy contempt for people who HADN'T opened the oyster—for all the stupid, cowardly nonentities and failures.

"Watch me!" said I to the world. "I'm not going to shuffle through life not knowing what it's all about. I'm not going to take the count like those poor simps. I'm going to know the How and the When and the Why. And, after that, I'm going to beat the game. WATCH MY SMOKE!"

So I crashed into life, all full of confidence and conceit. I was Going To Show Them!

Well—that's quite a few years ago. And I haven't shown them yet.

I do not yet know the How or the When or the Why of things.

I do not know why we are here or where we go after we are through with this life. I do not know what God is or what Man is or what I am. But, as regards myself, I am prepared to believe almost anything. I have shocked, surprised, disappointed and disgusted myself so often that I no longer make any bets about Elsie. I MAY do the loveliest things—or I MAY do the vilest—but you never can tell.

All of which has been most painful to discover. To have one's conceit and confidence flayed from one, bit by bit—hurts. And there isn't much of you left when the process is over. You're like the tailing in a mining pan—a tiny thread of gold after the great pile of muck has been washed away. Sometimes the gold tailing is so small only God can see it.

It isn't very gratifying, but sometimes I think that that is the purpose of life.

TO COME BACK AT LAST TO THE HUMILITY AND SIMPLICITY OF A LITTLE CHILD. TO BE WISE ENOUGH TO KNOW THAT ONE KNOWS NOTHING—TO BE KIND ENOUGH TO TOLERATE OTHER FOOLS—AND BRAVE ENOUGH TO LIVE GALLANTLY AND GENEROUSLY, EVEN THOUGH ONE IS IN THE DARK.

If there is a greater goal to human experiences than that, I have not found it.

In Gay Paree

PARIS, March 6.—The tiny bandbox shops, stretching for a dozen blocks or more along the Rue de Rivoli, are an ever-changing and constant delight for the ladies. Almost the entire stocks are in glittering windows, and there is room for no more than a half dozen customers in the largest shop.

The clerks speak English with a decided British accent, but the venerable French mammas and papas with shoulder shawls preside at the cube-like brass-tipped cashier's cages. No clerk has ever been able successfully to tap the till in France. And there are few cash registers in small shops.

Along the Rivoli the appeal is almost entirely for feminine vanities—necklaces, rings, bracelets, gloves, rhinestone do-dads, watches, vanity cases, perfumes, cosmetics, cigaret holders, swagger sticks and such. Clerks escort customers to the sidewalk for the final bow.

The Rivoli sidewalk is in fantastic mosaic designs, and a portico overhead protects pedestrians from the elements. The famous Rumplemayer's tea room is in the mid-center of the promenade. In the shadows of the portico supports lurk those conscienceless guides who whisper of the Paris depravities, there being several.

Then there are the sidewalk "pitch men"—the one-armed, one-fingered fellow whose face resembles a ball of hair and who inks your caricature with a few lightning strokes; the puppy man who walks in the center of a circular platform filled with black French poodles, the phrenologist in his portable stand, map sellers and vendors of books.

At noon shopkeepers on the Rivoli close up, carrying the door-handles with them, and go to the two-hour luncheon. The seasoned Parisian always shops along this center immediately after lunch. He knows the proprietors are slightly mellow with luncheon wine, and better bargains are likely.

Americans who do not dicker are missing the real delight of shopping. His first price is just a "feeler," and if you accept it he suffers actual disappointment, but he will, of course, accept your money. But they do that all over the world, I suppose.

The aged beau in Paris is ever amusing. He slicks up his beard, butters his hair, preens his beard and appears for a promenade, quite the perfumed dandy, every afternoon on the Champs Elysees. His flirtatious conquests are harmless but amusing. He merely loves the ladies. I saw one this afternoon near 70 with the rickets or something, carrying on with the ardor of a 19-year-old.

And young hand-holding lovers still promenade in the cold and leafless Bois. There is nothing private about Paris petting. The young cling to the belief love is a glorious thing for the whole world to look upon. They will stop, starry-eyed, in a crowd, to embrace, and bus-top osculation is as casual as breathing. But there is no good excuse for men kissing each other in public.

In the flower market back of the Madelaine today I saw a Chinese in the soldier uniform of France, and to add to the incongruity he was talking English with an Oxonian accent.

My favorite Paris entertainment has vanished. It was a robin with a wooden leg, trained by a kindly little old man to perform all sorts of tricks for promenaders in the Tuilleries. No one seems to know what has become of them.

Danger of Over-Population
By DR. FRANK CRANE.

A Wisconsin professor is out with the prediction that soon this old world will be overpopulated.

There will be standing room only and not near enough food to go around.

This he figures out by statistics of the rate of progress in human fecundity.

This alarm is not new. Some years ago a man by the name of Malthus announced some such law and declared that unless something was done pretty soon there would be too many people on earth.

Henry George and others neatly punctured the Malthusian theory. Nothing like what Malthus predicted took place, for facts have a way of upsetting theories.

The trouble is that statistics are valuable only up to a certain point. At that point the law of diminishing returns begins to operate.

The Medici, the Fuggers and others were very rich men in their day. All you have to do is to take a pencil and paper and figure out how their fortunes should have increased. By this time they should have owned the whole planet and several adjoining stars. The only trouble was they didn't. Something happened.

Riches can only accumulate up to a certain point. Then they begin to dissolve in one way or another.

In the same way, if the laws of health permit a man to live 70 years, why shouldn't he live 170?

The only trouble is he doesn't. Somewhere the law of diminishing returns begins to operate.

It is like the man who taught his horse to eat shavings by putting green goggles on him. It worked all right. The only trouble was that about the time he learned to eat shavings he had to die and spoil the experiment.

Somewhere and somehow Mr. Professor's statistics are going to bump into the law of diminishing returns.

Whatever we are, nature has secret ways of taking care of herself.

Will some juggler of statistics or some learned professor please tell us how it happens that about so many men and so many women are born each year, how the ratio of the sexes keeps about the same, and tell us why the enormous destruction of war does not seem to alter the ratio?

It looks as if whoever planned this universe in the first place is seeing to it that the human race is going to go on as long as he wants it to.

We might smash into a comet any day, or we might have an earthquake that would grind us all to smithereens or any one of a dozen things might happen. We are all gambling on the probabilities that things will go on about as they are. Nobody knows.

OH, THESE WOMEN!
By LEOLA ALLARD.

HENRY CLIVE is going to Hollywood to get Florenz Ziegfeld the loveliest of the screen beauties for "Follies Glorification." (That doesn't mean glorifying their follies.)

Mr. Clive says: "The girl I select probably will know nothing of it until the selection is made. Nor will it make any difference who she may be."

Any difference to whom?

Announcement is made that one out of every six automobiles is driven by a woman.

But that estimate is made on front-seat driving.

The Bishop of Ely and the Viscount Lacelles of London are committing poetry against the short skirt. How can anything that incites a bishop and a viscount to make jokes be wrong? The bishop says: "So many women cannot afford to be so candid about their ankles."

Bishops should look UP and viscounts should look OUT. Then the length of skirts will not trouble them.

Ruth Elder gets a "Spanish decoration."

Can that be the bull?

Trustees for the estate of Peter Cooper Hewitt are trying to teach his widow to speak Scotch. It is a very difficult language for an extravagant widow with $11,00,000. Those who speak it fluently are born Scotch.

A woman who attended New York's strange nine-act play, which lasts from 5 till 11 p. m., reports that between acts toward midnight, men were beginning to talk about needing shaves, and women about going out to get their faces lifted.

Miss Louise Luckenbill, who turned down an offer of the vice presidency of a big advertising corporation, says that the thing that bars women from business success is that they talk too much.

I know a woman who traveled quite some distance and she kept talking. She kept telling the boss how wonderful he was.

Anne Petriuniate, 17-year-old seamstress, risked her life over Niagara's whirlpool rapids to get into the United States. She donned men's clothes and a cap and walked a narrow steel ledge under a railroad bridge.

If that seemed a bit difficult to Miss Anne, wait till she tries to cross Broadway at Forty-second street!

Blanche Vischnitzer, 19, who earned at the most $19 a week, saved her brother from execution by explaining his abnormality since a child. She was the only member of the boy's family who helped him. "I didn't think it was a blot to be associated with a murderer," she explained.

After saving her brother, the girl hurried to find her mother, selling papers in the snow, to tell her the good news. "I wanted to make her happy, too," said Blanche.

The girl had taken beatings from the abnormal brother, but didn't blame him. She said, "Poor boy, he didn't know any better."

The kind of sympathy and understanding God meant all women to have.
